BURGLARY IN TRENTON.

A Dry Goods Store "Cracked" and $5,000 Worth of Goods Stolen.

Shortly after midnight yesterday morning a burglarious entrance was effected into the store of Baker & Brother, on State street, Trenton, N. J., and silks and furs to the value of nearly $5,000 abstracted. The robbery was detected when a member of the firm opened the store at the usual hour in the morning. The incursion was made by the rear, through a barn, and by breaking open a cellar door. The store door was pried from its fastenings. Strange to say gas was burning in the store all night and a private watchman, employed to patrol the street and watch all the stores on the block, was on duty when the burglary is supposed to have been committed. An auger and bit were found in the barn, and a long, narrow bag for packing silk in was discovered in the store.

Three suspicious looking men were seen to board the owl train, which left Trenton for New York at fifteen minutes to two o'clock, having a large, russet colored trunk which, it is supposed, contained the stolen property.

A carpet bag, containing some of the stolen property, was found yesterday afternoon in a cemetery near the railroad depot.

New York, Friday, Nov. 27, 1874.

From our reports this morning the probabilities are that the weather to-day will be clear.

A BRIGHT, BRACING AND BEAUTIFUL day the great body of the people of the United States were given yesterday for Thanksgiving.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—After a session of seven weeks the Vermont Legislature, having finished its necessary work, has adjourned and dispersed.

IRON AGAINST IRON AGAIN.—The Carlists have resumed the bombardment of Irun. They are evidently stronger than they have been represented to be in the reports from Madrid.

AN ANCHOR TO THE WINDWARD has been dropped by Spain in a treaty with Dominica, providing for the perfect neutrality of that Republic in reference to the island of Cuba, which means that St. Domingo is not to become a rendezvous for Cuban filibusters.

THE TROUBLES IN THE COAL REGIONS.—The causes of the recent troubles in the coal regions of Pennsylvania are explained in letters from the Mayor of Scranton, Pa., and the president of a miners' association in that locality, which we publish to-day. The terrible distress and poverty in which hundreds of families find themselves at present there can hardly be overestimated.

A SINGULAR DYING REQUEST.—To prophesy that a man will die with his shoes on has been for immemorial time a euphemistic way of saying that he would be sure to be hanged. Perhaps it was to refute such predictions concerning himself, regarding them more in the letter than the spirit, that a half-breed murderer who was hanged at Cheyenne lately asked permission to take his shoes off, as his dying request. The consolation he desired was granted, of course, but to the unprejudiced person it must appear very slight.

THE DESTITUTION IN NEBRASKA from the ravages of the grasshoppers extends, it is said, to twenty thousand people, and Kansas has nearly forty thousand shorn of their supplies by clouds of grasshoppers. Kansas, however, has still comparatively an abundance of corn, wheat and bacon, while Nebraska, with her much smaller population, is short and calls for help for her thousands of industrious people on the verge of starvation. The neighboring States should be drawn upon by the State authorities for its immediate necessities, and the State itself should meet the emergency, and without further delay.

Prince Bismarck.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in an article marked with more than usual ability, sums up the attitude of Bismarck toward the present public sentiment in Germany. This journal recognizes that Prince Bismarck has enjoyed a high reputation for the intellectual as well as the moral qualities of statesmanship which it would be almost heresy to question. "The prestige of a splendid success has won for him the almost superstitious confidence of large numbers of his countrymen." "He is in the position of an actor whose every word is sure of the plaudits of the majority of his audience, and who at the same time can and does silence any one who ventures to hiss." At the same time the writer questions whether the policy of the Prince has always met the approval of Germany. "The arrest," says the editor, "of a highly placed and respected official, with every attendant circumstance of harshness and indignity; the forcible entry of his house and the ransacking of his private bureaus, as a policeman rummages the trunk of a suspected footboy; his subjection to a confinement of needless rigor, and his final reappearance in public palpably aged by the physical and mental distress he had suffered—all these go to make up a spectacle which a people pretending to civilization could hardly in any case have regarded with approval." The editor refuses to doubt—it would be an insult to the Germans to doubt—that the arrest of Count Arnim, with the circumstances attending it, has excited aversion and resentment among the majority of the people; and if there were any doubts to remove they would have been effectually dissipated by the weak and half-hearted defence of Prince Bismarck in the so-called liberal papers—a defence which "shows on its face either the special pleading of half-ashamed partisans, or the caution naturally instilled by the strict supervision of a watchful government."

In addition to this mistake we have what is called the "Trèves affair," the arrest of Father Schneider before the altar of his church. As is justly remarked it is absurd to suppose that the police could not have taken Father Schneider into custody without waiting until he was before the altar in the performance of the sacred offices of his faith. It seemed as if the process had been ingeniously selected, not merely to annoy a stubborn priest, but to insult the faith of Rome. There is also what is called "the case of Father Helfrich," a clergyman who was seized by the police in similar fashion. It is said that the circumstances of this arrest were designed to show the "futility of the popular belief encouraged by the clergy that a priest at the altar is above the law." Such a defence, the Pall Mall Gazette well says, is "practically equivalent to an admission that the Trèves business was of a piece with the Arnim affair, as subsequently interpreted by events. The statesman who could go out of his way to answer every idle boast, or accept every insidious challenge that is thrown out to him, in defiance of what is almost an axiom with all orderly governments—the enforcement of law in the way least likely to provoke a breach of the peace—seems to show the same characteristics as the statesman who arrested Count Arnim; and in both cases the characteristics are those of a man whose policy is governed by temper, and who prefers to incur gratuitous odium and provoke unnecessary hostility rather than forego the gratification of a masterful spirit."

All this confirms what we have so often said since the beginning of the Arnim controversy—that Bismarck felt he was making a desperate contest for power. He would never have invited the severe struggle that now menaces him if he had not felt that his power rested upon an uncertain tenure. It is difficult to understand the exact relations of Bismarck to the German nation, for in our system there is no political analogy to that of Germany. We have been told by eloquent American writers like Mr. Medill and Mr. Bancroft that Germany now resembles the United States in its form of government and in the personal security which every citizen possesses. Yet we find that under this very liberal and free government it is possible for great noblemen to be thrown without warrant into dungeons, for priests to be dragged from the altar and for whole communities to be banished from the land of their birth and their ancestors. These are the developments of the recent German system, and we have waited with anxiety for some of those defenders of "German freedom and nationality" whose pens were so busy during the war to come to the front and explain it all; but no such defence is made, and it is becoming more and more evident that the German Chancellor has resolved to defy the public sentiment of Europe in the furtherance of his purpose. Even as cautious a statesman as Mr. Disraeli, in his Mansion House speech, did not hesitate to express an impression that, no doubt, rests in the mind of every Englishman. "What," he asked, "is land without liberty? And what is capital without justice? The working classes of this country have inherited personal rights which the nobility of other nations do not yet possess. Their persons and their homes are sacred. They have no fear of arbitrary arrests or domiciliary visits. They know, as the Lord Chancellor has justly reminded us, that the administration of law in this country is pure, and that it is no respecter of individuals or classes. They know very well that their industry is unfettered, that by the law of this country they may combine to protect the interest of labor, and, as the Commander-in-Chief has well reminded us, they know that, though it is open to all of them to serve their Sovereign by land or sea, no one can be dragged from his craft or his hearth to enter a military service which is repugnant to him." In other words, in England no man would be dragged from his home by any process of "arbitrary arrest," as a nobleman like Arnim had been dragged, and no Englishman could be taken from his fireside and compelled to give the best years of his life to the army, as is the case with every German. These are the calm but necessarily biting words of the English Premier. They tell us what Disraeli thinks of Bismarckism, and they have a further emphasis from what he says about France. "I cannot," he says, "refrain from expressing my belief that in this country generally there is an admiration of the elasticity which France has shown under her almost unheard-of disasters; and I have such confidence in the wise forbearance and the prudent magnanimity which her present rulers have shown, that I believe in their conduct we shall find another element for the maintenance of that peace in which we have confidence." In other words, while there is danger to the peace of Europe, while "in the present state of affairs on the Continent there is cause for anxiety," no such cause can be found in the "wise forbearance" and "prudent magnanimity" of France. For France, according to this high critic, has wisely forborne from resenting the wrongs heaped upon her by Germany, and has submitted with "prudent magnanimity" to the humiliations of her conqueror.

Prince Bismarck, fighting for the public approbation of the world, has met with its condemnation. Those who have been disposed to worship his star as the star of success are silent. Nor do we see in the German mind any of the former enthusiasm for the Chancellor. It was well enough to trample upon Danes and Austrians and Frenchmen; to violate treaties and customs and long-established laws; to deal with the foreigner with blood and iron. All this could be pardoned as an evidence of love for Germany, and from the conviction that so great a work as German unity could only be accomplished by severe, pitiless deeds. But Germany does not care to give her own arms to the rack and her own feet to the boot. Bismarck could send as many Frenchmen to jail as he pleased when he was master of Paris, but there can be no real liberty in a country where a citizen can receive the treatment visited upon Count Arnim. These are the thoughts that rest in the German mind, and men ask, How can there be liberty or peace where such things are possible?

The truth seems to be that in Germany there is a quarrel between two systems—the Prussian and the German system. Bismarck is a Prussian, trained in the school of the great Frederick. The law of that school was that when the King saw what he fancied he should take it; for kings were kings in those days of the David pattern, where will was law, and who reigned as the expression of God's power and grace. When Frederick desired Silesia he seized it. This, as he afterward confessed, he did "for glory." And yet he had no more right to Silesia than the cutpurse, who in those days was hanged for highway robbery, had to his stolen gold. He desired a part of Poland and he took it. When Napoleon was ravaging Europe Frederick's descendant offered him an alliance if he would increase Prussian territory. When the peace of Waterloo was made all that Prussia craved was money and land. The war against Denmark was for Holstein. The war against Austria gave Prussia several duchies; that against France Alsace and Lorraine—provinces to which Germany did not have one-half as good a right as England possesses to the New England States; for, while the New England States had only been free from England for one hundred years, Alsace and Lorraine had been free from Germany for twice that time. Bismarck has followed in the path of the great Frederick. His policy is traditional with Prussia. The difficulty is that Germany is not Prussian. A new nation has risen up—a nation of brave, clever, accomplished, truth-loving men, who do not choose to be ruled by the whip and spur. In the old times a Prussian king was wont to kick his Ministers when they smoked tobacco that did not suit him and to cudgel citizens who would not build their houses to please the royal fancy. The same spirit still lives, and Bismarck is its representative as much as Frederick in his palmiest days.

Against this principle Europe protests. Bismarck makes the mistake of the first Napoleon in forgetting that he is a man, after all, and that while God reigns no mere man can do more than a man's work. Success has inflamed his pride and ambition. The position he holds cannot last beyond the life of the old Emperor. To recede from it is to surrender—to fall from power and drag his party with him. The contest is between Prussianism on one side and Germany on the other—between absolutism and nationality—between the seventeenth and nineteenth centuries. Germany will submit to unusual measures, just as the United States submitted to arbitrary arrests during the war. But there is no war, and the only danger to peace rests in the policy of the Minister of blood and iron. Bismarck, who rose like Wolsey, seems about to fall like him. Much as men respect his genius and honor him for his services to Germany, we cannot help feeling that his recent policy is inimical to liberty, and that, should he fall, it would be the fall of a stern, absolute and crushing system.

The Rights of Newspaper Correspondents.

The indignities offered to the correspondents of the HERALD and Times at Fontarabia and the attempt to place the London bureau of the HERALD under the surveillance of police detectives at Prince Bismarck's instigation are very properly receiving the condemnation of the press of all countries. Such acts are singularly out of place in this age of intelligence and thought. But they may not be without compensating results. One of the subjects suggested by the Emperor of Russia for the consideration of the proposed conference at St. Petersburg on the international usages of war is that of the status of newspaper correspondents accompanying armies in times of war. The Emperor desires that certain rules shall be adopted to define the privileges, responsibilities and obligations of correspondents of the press, and that within these limits the correspondents shall be regarded as non-belligerents, following the army for a legitimate purpose and entitled to safe conduct and protection. The Sovereign of one of the greatest Powers of the world thus shows his sympathy with the progress and enlightenment of the world. No one can fail to be impressed with the contrast between the Emperor's position and that of a puny nation like Spain, which is ever ready to vent its malice against newspaper correspondents and to commit such petty outrages upon them as its courage will permit.

FANTASTICALS.—Groups of "fantasticals" were to be seen yesterday in different parts of the city, dressed in all manner of absurd and grotesque costumes, males and females, always dirty and not always sober—a poor burlesque of a carnival. Here and there they attracted crowds, excited jeers and laughter and obstructed travel; but they soon passed out of sight, to the gratification of respectable people, and were forgotten. "Fantasticals," however, are not confined to the mummers of Thanksgiving Day. We have our official fantasticals, of whom poor old Mr. Havemeyer is a grotesque type, and our financial fantasticals, like the unhappy Comptroller, who leads us into all manner of absurdities and blocks the way of progress. Then there are social fantasticals and literary fantasticals, all of whom are nuisances to decent people. It would be fortunate if we could get rid of the whole tribe as easily as we escape from the buffoons who disgraced humanity on the streets yesterday.

Butler's Earthquake.

It was the opinion of the astute Cotton Mather, who understood Massachusetts thoroughly, that "the devil might have sufficient skill in chemistry to get up a thunder shower" in that part of the world; and if a thunder shower, why not an earthquake? Is there any superior dignity in your earthquake to remove it from the operation of a rule that is good for thunder showers? Is there not the same equality of dignity and standing among natural phenomena that there is among men? If there is not the republican party has still a noble future before it; but we believe there is, and we therefore feel assured that the eminent personage alluded to could have got up an earthquake in Massachusetts. Lately, however, he has not been in that State. It has ceased to be the seat of all the moral virtues, it has gone over to the democrats, and the great brimstone functionary has departed, perhaps for South Carolina. In his absence there is only one other magnate in Massachusetts equal to the organization of an earthquake, and that, of course, is Mr. Butler. The responsibility for this event must, therefore, be laid at that gentleman's door. But what object has he in getting up an earthquake now? What precise end has he to gain by detonation at the present time? On general principles we can comprehend his disposition to make a noise in the world, and while he was in the neighborhood of Fort Fisher we could understand the profit to his reputation of a general "dusting down" of the solid walls of that part of the world; but why "imagine howlings" for the quiet people of Massachusetts just now? Is it a case of what the slang of the period designates "pure cussedness?" As the Essex district refuses to send Ben to Congress any more it is just possible that since it can no longer be of any use to him he has resolved to give it a parting taste of his quality. But we are disposed to take another view. Butler is too good an economist to waste an earthquake in the mere indulgence of spite. No, it is an early preparation for the next Congressional canvass. He intends to frighten out of that district all but his own supporters. Ben's friends will never flinch at a little subterranean nonsense. Sulphur and the inflammable drugs generally have no terrors for people with a powerful friend at court; so they will stand their ground. But the people whose failings lean to virtue's side will leave by more or less general consent. One earthquake, however, will hardly do it. It will take several. The Essex district may, therefore, prepare for other earthquakes. It will be damaged, of course; but that we cannot help. Corner lots must be cheap somewhere, and why not there as well as elsewhere? But whatever happens to Essex we rejoice that Butler has been heard from. That long-continued silence was becoming oppressive, and excited apprehension was painfully on the stretch. Now that it is known where Ben is, and that the outline of a new plan is visible, men will breathe easier.

Sermons in the Newspapers.

There is a very neat little difference between Mr. Beecher and a former foreman in the Tribune printing office as to whether it was in the columns of our contemporary or of some other paper not named that reports of sermons were first given. This is the way these things always happen. Robert Fulton did not make the first steamboat. Somebody else did it. You can read all about it in the history of somebody else's life. Watt didn't make the first steam engine. Somebody in ancient Greece contemplated his teakettle while Watt was yet floating around in space as an "atomic molecule." To associate the name of Morse with the telegraph, or Franklin with electricity, or Newton with gravitation, is moonshine. These associations are the fond delusions of common knowledge. In order to destroy all these claims of inventors it is only necessary to establish that somebody watched a teakettle boil before Watt did, or carried a steam engine over a river in a rowboat before Fulton was born, or flew a kite before the time of Franklin, or saw a pippin tumble to the earth before Newton ever went into an orchard. This is the patent process for invalidating discovery. Sermons were first regularly reported in the HERALD. For years other journals left us a monopoly of this field, and we gave on Monday morning as part of the news of the day all the important sermons preached on Sunday. Some people of the Puritanic stripe even thought it was a very great outrage on our part. And the fact that the HERALD first made sermons a feature of the daily news will not be invalidated by showing that some other paper had printed a sermon now and then long before.

Civil Service Reform.

It seems to be certain that the President has expressed his determination to sustain the civil service reform measure and to enforce it in spite of the clamor of those republicans who contend that the only way to save the party is to turn out one class of office-holders and appoint another class. The President, no doubt, meant to have civil service reform in the beginning. When he became ambitious and prone to flattering counsellors, and with the third term phantom leading him on as Hamlet was led by his father's ghost, he neglected civil service reform and appointed men merely because they were efficient politicians as ruthlessly as ever Andrew Jackson appointed them. But he sees the folly of that as he no doubt sees the folly of many other things. He sees that, after all, he has more to gain or lose in the two years before him than any man in his party. He has his fame as President and General to conserve. He has the pride of history. He will be remembered when nearly every man now living will be forgotten, and he must be jealous of that memory. He does not care to throw away all he has gained and all he may gain to save politicians who are largely responsible for the ruin that has fallen upon his administration. It is his duty to save his fame and to identify himself with all reforms, and more especially with the reform in our civil service.

The Thanksgiving Celebration.

Thanksgiving Day was celebrated yesterday with so much enthusiastic unanimity that we infer the Rev. Mr. Frothingham's sermon last Sunday, condemning its observance as grotesquely ridiculous, made but little impression on the public. Indeed, without any personal knowledge of the matter, but simply on à priori grounds, we are quite sure that it made as little impression on Mr. Frothingham. We presume that he enjoyed his Thanksgiving dinner all the more for his sermon, for it is an idiosyncrasy with this eminent clergyman to repudiate and oppose authority, and no authority can be to him higher than his own. Having ridiculed the observance of Thanksgiving Day, consistency required him to observe it, and we have no doubt he was consistent.

But if he did not celebrate this joyful festival millions of others—and in this city hundreds of thousands—indubitably did. The American people have not a surfeit of holidays, and the few they do possess they are wise enough to use. They were, first of all, thankful for one of those golden days which come seldom at the close of November—blue skies and blue waters, and cool, sweet air, tempered with the warmth of a cloudless sun. Whether this delicious day was a special gift of Providence to grateful humanity or the result of natural laws, they did not pause to consider, but were thankful without particularly caring why. Nor was this general joy confined to individuals and families. New York is a generous city, giving largely and freely, and one of the most pleasing features of the day was its celebration at all our charitable institutions. The report which we give of these festivals, which the poor prize so much, but faintly indicates the delight which attended them. The churches had special services and the theatres gave extra performances; the capital jokes about Turkey and the Porte were made simultaneously at innumerable tables, and have not seemed funnier at any time within the past thirty years. Nothing marred the pleasure of the day but the consciousness that it must soon end and the painful experiences of a few persons who had indulged too freely in the good things before them. But these unhappy individuals will be thankful to-day that Thanksgiving Day is over, and have simply postponed their gratitude to the time when they get well.

"Swindling Operations."

M. Clement Duvernois, of Paris, goes to prison for two years for a financial operation not more reprehensible morally than the operation of Little Emma, in which a United States Minister Plenipotentiary was concerned in London; in fact, not more reprehensible than operations that are started by the hundred every day in the year at all the speculative centres. Half the intellectual activity of Wall street is excited over projects with no better economical foundation than the Spanish scheme that has sent Duvernois to prison as a swindler—has put the indelible brand of crime on a life that was above the average for fair record and promise. Duvernois was a journalist, a man of clear perceptions and vigorous intellect. He sat in the Chamber of Deputies, has occupied important posts in the government of his country and has been in politics nearly all his life, at one time as a liberal and then as an imperialist. He is, therefore, no vulgar jailbird; but he tampered with a scheme to get the money of the public in exchange for printed swindles and away he goes. We may measure the disregard for persons of the French law in matters of this sort by the fact that a gentleman of brilliant talents, who received a very large vote for the Presidency of the United States, might go to the same prison for the same offence if French justice could lay hands on him. Facts of this sort have a good effect on the financial mind, and they force us to concede that "they manage these things better" in the Gallic capital than we do. How some of that sort of justice would clean out Wall street! It would be much less free there; but there might be a compensation for that in the honesty it would enforce. And what would be the consequence of making Wall street honest? Here is a speculation that touches the edge of the infinite.

Journalism and Its Changes.

The announcement seems to be true that Colonel John W. Forney, the founder and editor of The Press, of Philadelphia, has sold a controlling interest in that journal to Colonel A. K. McClure, who will become its editor with the beginning of the new year. Colonel Forney retires altogether from journalism, and will, it is said, spend some years in Europe.

It is about sixteen years since Colonel Forney founded The Press. He had edited The Pennsylvanian, the democratic organ in Philadelphia, and the Washington Union when it was the democratic organ of President Pierce. The Press began in 1857. Mr. Buchanan had been elected President, and Colonel Forney, dissatisfied with the treatment he received from the new Executive, started his newspaper. Beginning as a democratic organ and supporting Mr. Buchanan, it very soon took sides with Douglas and Walker, leading the anti-Lecompton movement and contributing largely to that disruption of the democratic party which secured the election of Lincoln. Thenceforward it was a republican paper and so remained until the present time. It is understood that Colonel Forney has long felt dissatisfied with Grant and the party, and when he went to Europe it was because he could not support and did not wish to oppose. His retirement from The Press marks the withdrawal from journalism of one of its oldest, boldest and bravest members. Although generally acting in close harmony with parties and political movements, Colonel Forney has always shown the utmost pride in the integrity and advancement of journalism, respecting its amenities and responsibilities and striving to increase its dignity and usefulness.

We do not know what Colonel McClure proposes to do with The Press. He has a high reputation in Pennsylvania as a writer and a politician. His success will depend upon whether he means to be a journalist or a politician. He cannot hold both of these offices. If he is wise he will choose the higher and nobler one, throw politics to the dogs who seem now to usurp all political opportunity, and make The Press an independent newspaper.

THE JURY in the Washington safe burglary case spent their Thanksgiving Day in a state of grateful incarceration, expressed by psalm singing and card playing. At last advices they had gone to bed without much prospect of soon agreeing on a verdict.

PERSONAL INTELLIGENCE.

General H. H. Baxter, of Vermont, is sojourning at the Brevoort House.

Congressman James Wilson, of Iowa, is staying at the St. James Hotel.

Mme. Audral, a daughter of Roger Collard, has just died at her home in France.

Congressman William Loughridge, of Iowa, is registered at the Grand Central Hotel.

Mayor N. F. Graves, of Syracuse, is among the latest arrivals at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

On the 3d of November a marble slab three feet by four in size was placed on the front of a house in the village of Motier, Switzerland. It bears this inscription:—

M. Simonin, an acute observer, who recently visited this country, read a paper on America before the French Society of Political Economy at its last session. One of his observations indicates that an instrument, now familiar with us, has not yet found its way to France. "By the side of a banker's table a band of paper constantly rolls from a little reel and falls into a basket below, like a stream of running water, and on this, as it passes out one sees printed, one after another, the market rates, the changes—even the daily news."

In the memoir of Stanislas de Girardin, who owned the domain of Ermenonville, there is an account of a visit to that place of the first Napoleon. At the tomb of Rousseau he said, as recounted in the memoirs, "It would have been better for the repose of France if this man had never existed." "Why?" said De Girardin. "He prepared the Revolution," said Napoleon. "It seems to me," said the proprietor, "that it is not for you to complain of the Revolution." "Well," said Napoleon, "the future will know if it would not have been better for France that neither Rousseau nor myself had ever existed." He was then First Consul.

AMUSEMENTS.

Italian Opera—Il Barbiere di Seviglia.

The Italian opera does not seem to come under the popular head of Thanksgiving amusements, for there was a terrible dearth of patrons last night at the performance of Rossini's comic opera "Il Barbiere di Seviglia." The performance was not attractive in any sense of the word. The cast was the following:—Rosina, Mlle. Donadio; Almaviva, Signor Benfratelli; Bartolo, Signor Fiorini; Basilio, Carl Formes; Figaro, Signor Del Puente. It is impossible to speak in terms of commendation of the performance except in the case of Del Puente. Mlle. Donadio failed to give even a passing interest to the rôle of Rosina, and Benfratelli was utterly inadequate to the requirements of the tenor rôle. Carl Formes has not recovered his voice, and has at his with one who heard him in his prime to criticise twenty years later the performance of one of the greatest artists in his line, who has ever sung such rôles as Basilio, Marcel, Bertram and Leporello, we are compelled to say that the operatic career of Carl Formes is past, and that every rôle he essays at the present day is an injury to his past fame. It would be difficult for any impresario to present a worse representation of Rossini's opera. "Lohengrin" will be given to-night as a farewell performance of the season, and no one should miss the wonderful impersonation of the rôle of Elsa by the greatest of American prime donne, Mlle. Albani.

THE FIFTH MARYLAND.

Visit of the Regiment to the Eastern Shore—Enthusiastic Reception by the Citizens of Talbot County.

EASTON, Md., Nov. 26, 1874.

This usually quiet town was ablaze with excitement to-day, the occasion being the reception of the Fifth Maryland. The regiment reached Easton Point at seven A. M., and marched rapidly to this city, where the men were provided with a substantial breakfast. At twelve o'clock they were publicly welcomed on the part of the people of Talbot county by Dr. Miniam Pinkney, of the United States Navy. A parade through the town and a very elegant dinner followed. At four o'clock P. M. the regiment was reviewed by General Bond, Adjutant General of the State.

The regiment was warmly congratulated upon the grace and precision of its movements. The houses of the citizens were thrown open during the day, and thousands flocked to Easton from the surrounding country to participate in the reception. The ladies were especially active in their efforts to illustrate the traditional hospitality of the Eastern Shore. The regiment left Easton Point about five o'clock for Baltimore.

FREEMANSBURG, Pa., Nov. 26, 1874.

At four o'clock this morning the startling announcement was made that the infant and only child of Mr. Allen Gloss had been stolen during the night. The current rumor proved to be true. Some person or persons had entered the dwelling, which is a one and a half story frame and situated on the borough line, and taken the little one out of the cradle, which stood at the side of the bed in which lay the mother, unconscious of what was going on. The excitement is very great and many are the theories. However, the case is a mystery and baffles the skill of the police and others, who have been unremitting in the search for the missing child. This case will be thoroughly sifted.

THE CANADIAN RECIPROCITY TREATY.

British Commercial Opposition to American Trade Interests—A Remonstrance and Ministerial Reply.

LONDON, Nov. 26, 1874.

A deputation representing fifty-two Chambers of Commerce waited on Lords Derby and Carnarvon, the Foreign and Colonial Secretaries, to present objections to the proposed Canadian Reciprocity treaty with the United States.

Mr. Sampson Lloyd said under the proposed treaty the manufacturers of England were placed at a great disadvantage compared with those of the United States. The treaty was unfair in principle, and would be exceedingly injurious in practical effect. He wished to submit as a general principle, that in any case where a British colony or dependency negotiated a treaty with a foreign country, England should not be placed in a worse position than the foreign country.

Lord Derby replied that the government fully agreed to this principle.

Mr. Barron, representing Leeds, said he did not desire to have a protective clause. He only wished Canada would not grant America anything more than England.

Mr. Behrens, representing Bradford, stated there was a party in Canada which was so powerful that it might take action prejudicial to England if the treaty was not clearly worded to prevent it. He asked for the insertion of a clause providing that the United States shall never have the right to claim any remission of duties not accorded to British commerce.

Lord Derby then replied at length. He said:—"I do not know that we ever received a deputation in whose views we so entirely concur. Your case is in substance acceded to absolutely, entirely. We agree with you on the main point, that in every negotiation of this kind it is the duty of the government to see that English trade and commerce are not placed at a disadvantage as compared with those of foreign countries. We should fail most grossly in our duty if for any consideration whatever we allowed the imposition of a differential duty against our own manufacturers. That never was our intention. There is nothing in the proposed treaty, as we understand it, leading to that conclusion. I learn that apprehensions are entertained on the subject with some surprise. As regards the difficulty of defining the articles mentioned in the schedule with sufficient clearness something must be allowed for the good sense and faith of the two governments charged with the interpretation of the treaty. As for the danger of creating bad feeling between England and Canada if any provisions unfavorable to British trade are inserted in the treaty, I am firmly convinced no such provisions exist, and I agree that did they exist they would have created bad feeling. There is another side to the question. While protecting British trade we are bound to look at the peculiar position of Canada in her relations to the United States. We are bound to place no unnecessary obstacles in the way of the freest commercial relations between those countries. If for any supposed interest of our own we objected to a treaty establishing such freedom it is perfectly clear that discontent among loyal Canadians would result. Those attached to the imperial government, who, I believe, immensely preponderate, would lend strength to the party which looks forward to annexation to the United States. I apprehend that the views of those who suppose that this treaty establishes a differential duties in favor of America is that the duties on American goods were to be diminished at once, whereas the duties on the same class of English goods were only to be reduced in a series of years. You say there is no guarantee of this in the treaty. The reason is that the commercial relations of England and Canada cannot be dealt with in a treaty with a foreign Power. They are relations of a purely domestic character. If any Canadian Parliament were hereafter to seek to impose differential duties the Governor General would be competent to reserve such an act for the consideration of the home government. I make the statement clearly and distinctly that there is nothing in this treaty which, considering the relations of the mother country with the colonies would make it possible for Canada to impose differential duties on England in favor of the United States.

Lord Carnarvon spoke in similar terms, pointing out that Canada had never shown any intention of imposing duties discriminating against England.

THE RECIPROCITY QUESTION IN CANADA.

Explanation of the New Dominion Premier of the Term "Unmanufactured Lumber."

A deputation of Ottawa lumbermen waited on the Premier yesterday afternoon, and asked for explanation on the clause in the Reciprocity Treaty which refers to unmanufactured lumber. Mr. McKenzie said what was understood between the Secretary at Washington and the Dominion government was all dressed and planed lumber, mouldings, &c.

THE SAFE BURGLARY TRIAL.

An Eager Crowd Waiting for the Verdict—Alleged Tampering with the Jury—Reported Ten for Acquittal and Two for Conviction.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26, 1874.

Since the safe burglary conspiracy case was given to the jury, at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, there has not been an hour in which an eager and anxious crowd has not been waiting around the City Hall, and there has not been a trial since that of John Surratt which has stimulated so great a desire to hear the verdict of the jury. All kinds of rumors floated about during last night and took shape in the morning papers. Harrington, Whitley, Nettleship and a number of their friends were on the watch, while a coterie of memorialists showed a similar interest. It is asserted, with some show of correctness, that three or four notes passed between the jury room window and Harrington's friends; but, on the other hand, it seems next to impossible for such a transaction to have taken place, as the jury are in the third story of the City Hall, and if a note had been dropped from the window it was as likely to be picked up by one party as another, for the moon was shining brightly all night. Pretty good authority, however, asserts it to be true. The morning papers declare ten for acquittal and two for conviction. Upon tracing the authority for the statement this fact has been verified—namely, that several persons standing within hearing of the window, which was open at the top, heard the exclamation in the jury room, "Are you two 'blokes' going to stand out against ten gentlemen all night?" Card playing, psalm singing and discussion consume the time of the jurors. Harrington's office, and also the office of Mr. Christy, counsel for the memorialists, are directly in view of the two windows of the jury room and about twenty rods distant, and rumors of sign telegraphing between them and the jury room are prevalent. At a late hour this afternoon the jury had given no indications of an agreement. The doors of the City Hall are being locked and there are only a few persons lounging about the steps.

THE JURY STANDS

NO INDICATIONS OF AGREEMENT.

At half-past nine o'clock P. M. the jury was still out, with no indications of an agreement. There seems to be no doubt that ten are for acquittal and two for conviction.

LATER.—The jury have all retired for the night. The Court meets at ten o'clock to-morrow.

GOOD TEMPLARS.

Proceedings of the Grand Lodge at Brockville, Ont.—Election of Officers—Mass Meeting of the Children.

The following were elected representatives to the right worthy Grand Lodge:—Brothers Oronhyatahcka, Ormston, Henry and McDonagh; alternates Brothers Leach, Ash, Scott and French. The auditor's report was presented and adopted, and an auditor for the ensuing year was elected. J. H. Samuel, of London, was elected general superintendent. A vote of thanks to the various railways was adopted. At three o'clock a mass meeting of children was held in the Town Hall. The meeting was addressed by Mrs. M. B. O'Donnell, of Lowville, N. Y., chief superintendent of the Juvenile Templars; Mrs. Watson, of England, and Wanoano, chief of the Delaware Indians. The meeting adjourned until to-morrow.

A DAY OF MERCY.

Pardon of Convicts by the Governor of Massachusetts—Liberty Granted to One Fifteen Year and Three Life Prisoners—Thrilling Scene on Presentation of the Papers.

BOSTON, Nov. 26, 1874.

There are very few places in New England or in the country where the Puritan festival of Thanksgiving is more positively observed than in the Massachusetts State Prison. It does not follow from the hearty manner in which the occasion is noticed that the inmates are specially thankful for being where they are, but the fact that the occasion is set apart for the granting of sundry pardons to a few of the most meritorious conspires to render the occasion one of very special interest to all concerned. None of the prisoners are aware upon whom the lucky acts of executive clemency will fall until the names are read in the presence of all of them, and hence the anxiety which all feel is more easily imagined than described. Out of the 700 or 800 convicts the prize of liberty to-day was granted to four of their number. At half-past ten in the morning all the prisoners were assembled in the chapel, and there were also gathered a few prominent citizens of Boston and vicinity, who were present at the invitation of Warden Chamberlain. The Chaplain of the institution first read the proclamation for the day of gratitude and praise, and then with a fervent prayer the devotional exercises of the day were concluded. Subsequently a glee club from the Boston Musical Conservatory furnished some very choice gems of vocal and instrumental music, which was such a happy relief to the tediousness of prison life, that the convicts could not restrain themselves from frequent bursts of applause. Before announcing the pardons the Warden made a brief address to the men in his charge, complimenting them on their exemplary conduct during the year, and expressing regret that the boon of liberty could not fall upon more of them. The dull times, he said, had been felt in the prison the same as outside, and the contracts for their labor now did not afford work for more than one-half of their number. On account of this he had established a day school, selecting the instructors from among their number, and the experiment had been so eminently successful that he had no doubt but that hereafter the school would be continued as a regular feature of the prison. His discipline, he said, had always been strict and impartial, and by this system he had found that causes for punishment had been very perceptibly diminished. Coming then to the Warden said he presumed that was the matter uppermost in the minds of the prisoners, and the convicts concurred by a burst of applause. He said that he had received an envelope from the Governor which contained some pardons, but he had not yet broken the seal and he did not know how many there were or who were the lucky ones to be liberated by them. He then took the mysterious and valuable package from his pocket, an act which was the signal for the most profound and anxious silence. The anxiety of a man on trial for his life and awaiting the verdict of the jury could not have been more intense and painful than was manifested by every one of the seven or eight hundred prisoners. Taking up one of the documents the Warden smiled and remarked, "Well, I like that name." At this moment the suspense was indeed harrowing; but Mr. Chamberlain soon interrupted it by announcing the name of "Timothy Cronin." As the words fell from his lips there went up a loud and simultaneous shout of approval from all his fellow prisoners. Rising from his seat, an old gray-haired man, he attempted to make his way from the middle of the chapel to the forward platform, but the other convicts gathered around him in such numbers that it was impossible for him to proceed until the officers of the prison restored order. Cronin was sentenced from Boston for life, in 1862, for the crime of rape, and is now fifty-two years of age. During his twelve years of prison life his wife has ever been a faithful friend, and during the time has earned sufficient money to buy and furnish a modest house. She was at the prison to receive him when the pardon was granted. The other pardons fell respectively upon William McGrath, Michael Ryan and John Ryan, whose good luck was warmly applauded by the prisoners who were less fortunate. McGrath, who is fifty-two years of age, was sentenced for life from Worcester for the crime of murder in the second degree, and he has only been imprisoned for six years. A son and daughter were present to escort him home to Thanksgiving dinner. Michael Ryan, also sentenced for life, for highway robbery in Boston, had served eight years' time; and John Ryan, who was sentenced for fifteen years for manslaughter in Boston, had served nine years of his time. In all these cases there were mitigating circumstances in the offences committed, and the conduct of the men during imprisonment has been unexceptionable. Following these exercises and granting of pardons the prisoners were given an hour to mingle together in the yard, and afterward they were furnished with a sumptuous Thanksgiving feast.

THE MATTER OF PARDONS,

MASONIC.

Yesterday's Proceedings of the General Grand Chapter at Nashville, Tenn.—Report of the Committee on Jurisprudence—Election of Officers—Resolutions Adopted.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 26, 1874.

The General Grand Chapter was called from refreshment to labor at nine o'clock this morning with the grand officers and representatives as yesterday. The General Grand High Priest read a telegram from Hon. Elbert H. English, of Arkansas, accepting the office of General Grand High Priest, to which office he was elected yesterday. On motion M. E. George A. Donnelly, Past Grand High Priest of Arkansas, was directed to instal M. E. Elbert H. English, Most Excellent Grand High Priest elect. The Committee on Jurisprudence presented their report with accompanying resolutions, which, with the report, were adopted.

REPORT AND RESOLUTIONS.

Your committee cannot let the occasion pass without an expression of opinion in reference to the use of "substitutes." While their use was practised by old chapters and our fathers in Masonry walked in that way, we regret that a uniformity could not now be observed in this respect, and we disapprove of the legislation of State Grand Chapters forbidding their use, believing that the whole subject should be left to the several chapters, to use them or not, as demanded by the occasion.

Resolved, That this General Grand Chapter recognizes the newly organized Grand Chapter of Nevada, and enrolls it upon the list of constituents of this Grand body.

Resolved, That this General Grand Chapter, having been officially informed of the organization of the Grand Chapter of West Virginia, does hereby recognize the same as a duly organized Grand Chapter and most cordially and fraternally invites her to become a constituent of this General Grand Chapter, and that the General Grand Secretary be directed to forward an attested copy of this resolution to the Grand High Priest of said Grand Chapter; also, that the doings and decisions of the General Grand High Priests for the past three years be approved.

A resolution, providing for a reprint of the proceedings of the General Grand Chapter, from its organization in 1798 to and including the Convention of 1856, was adopted. The Convention was called off at eleven A. M. to five minutes past twelve P. M. to attend Divine service.

Afternoon Session.

Upon reassembling, after attending Divine service, the following resolution was adopted:—

Resolved, That it is clearly inconsistent with the provisions of the constitution of this General Grand Chapter for any Grand Chapter, Grand High Priest or Deputy Grand High Priest to issue a dispensation for the formation of a subordinate Chapter for a less sum than $90.

The following was adopted as a standing regulation of this General Grand Chapter:—

Resolved, That the State Grand Chapters throughout this jurisdiction be requested to cause to be paid annually to the General Grand Secretary of this General Grand Chapter the sum of one cent for each royal arch mason borne upon the rolls of their subordinates, at the date of their annual reports; the fund so created to be used to defray the necessary expenses of the General Grand Chapter.

A resolution recognizing the Grand Chapter of Nova Scotia was adopted. A resolution recognizing the Grand Mark Lodge of England and Wales was postponed until the next triennial convocation. A committee, consisting of Companions Lewis, of Connecticut, and Taylor and Cassidy, of New York, was appointed to consider and report at the next triennial convocation the proper titles of officers of Royal Arch Chapters. A committee was appointed, consisting of Companions Josiah H. Drummond, of Maine; D. F. Day, of New York; A. T. Smythe, of South Carolina; S. A. Lockwood, of Connecticut; J. K. O'Neall, of Ohio; John Frizzell, of Tennessee; Z. C. Luse, of Iowa, and Elbert H. English, G. G. H. P., of Arkansas, with instructions to make a thorough revision of the constitution of the General Grand Chapter and report at the next triennial convocation. The installation of the General Grand officers elect was then taken up.

THE FOLLOWING OFFICERS

were installed by P. G. G. H. Drummond:—John Frizzell, of Tennessee, D. G. G. H. P.; R. F. Bower, Iowa, D. G. King; John McClelland, Massachusetts, G. Treasurer; C. G. Fox, New York, G. G. Secretary: Henry Bostwick, G. G. Royal Arch Captain.

A resolution providing for the installation of G. G. Scribe and G. G. C. Host by some General Grand officer, or some officer of their State Grand Chapters at some time hereafter, was adopted. A resolution of thanks to the G. G. H. P. was adopted. The following resolution, by M. E. P. G. G. H. P. Austin, of New York, was adopted:—

Resolved, That the thanks of this General Grand Chapter are unanimously due and are hereby most cordially tendered to the Grand Chapter and Masons of Tennessee, and of Nashville and Edgefield in particular, for the fraternal and hospitable reception and entertainment extended to the members of this body.

The minutes were then read and approved and the General Grand Chapter closed in ample form until the next triennial convocation.

SUDDEN DEATH.

Patrick Boland, mail carrier, dropped dead this afternoon while eating dinner.

GREAT FRAUDS DISCOVERED.

Breaking Up a Gang of Forgers—Wall Street Victimized to a Large Extent—The Secretary of a Philadelphia Insurance Company Arrested and Held for Examination—Forged Bonds Recovered.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 26, 1874.

For some days past it has been reported in Wall street, New York, that forgeries to the extent of from $100,000 to $200,000 were being unearthed, and that a large number of arrests were about to be made. The first arrest was made to-day in this city at an early hour, when George F. Hilt, of Seventeenth and Tioga streets, was arrested at his father's house on a charge of forgery.

Hilt is Secretary of the Safeguard Insurance Company of this city, the affairs of which have recently been under examination by Insurance Commissioner Foster. The charge was brought by William H. Reed, United States Secret Service detective, and Captain Thomas Dusenberry, detective from New York. It appears that these officials, with several men, came from New York last night. This morning they went to the home of Hilt, and as stated took him in charge. They took him to the depot to remove him to New York, but were prevented by one of Pinkerton's men, who had been watching accused since the 11th inst. He compelled them to bring him to the Central Office until a hearing could be had. It seems that Hilt hired office No. 22, at No. 48 New street, New York, June 7, under the name of J. E. Batchelder, where he has at intervals being doing business ever since with seven or eight others. Captain Irving, of New York, two days ago went to the place which was vacated last Saturday, and found two $5,000 United States bonds, one of $10,000 and some insurance bonds alleged to have been forged by accused. The prisoner was held in $10,000 bail for a further hearing on Wednesday next, when the New York officers promise additional and important testimony.

It is reported that Hilt is cognizant of large forgeries in Chicago and Northwestern Railroad bonds, and also of one of the Pacific railroads, said bonds having been largely negotiated in this city and Chicago, and if report be true some startling developments may be expected within a few days.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 26, 1874.

The Chicago express over the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, which left Camden station at half-past ten o'clock last night, when about five miles from this city ran into a number of horses on the track. Eight of the horses were killed, the engine was thrown from the track and the train delayed two hours. The engineer, George Buckley, was severely injured by jumping from the engine. None of the passengers were injured. The horses were valued at $3,000.

RACING ON THE SCHUYLKILL.

Contest Between the Barge Crews of the Schuylkill Navy—The Contesting Crews and the Race.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 26, 1874.

The contest between the barge crews of the Schuylkill Navy to-day attracted a large number of persons to the vicinity of the races, both banks of the Schuylkill River being occupied by hundreds of spectators. The eight-oar shell race between the two crews of the Undine Club started at ten o'clock from Peter's Island, the course being to Turtle Rock, distance one and a half miles. The following were

THE CONTESTING CREWS:—

The Albion, owned by the Undine Club—Messrs. Gillingham, Colahan, Hughes, Rokewhan, Faust, Smith, Patterson Boyd and Brandon; L. Keys, coxswain.

The Longfellow, loaned by the Crescent Club—Messrs. Tucker, Baker, Madiera, E. Wing, De Haven, Page, Wilson and Roberts; C. E. Steel, coxswain.

The race was won by the Longfellow in 10m. 10s., the Albion coming in second in 10m. 15s.

THE 'LONGSHOREMEN.

Meeting at St. James' Hall Last Night—The Strike to Become General To-Day.

The delegates of the 'longshoremen met again last night in St. James' Hall, and were presided over by Mr. Roger Burke. The general strike of all members of the 'Longshoremen's Union, to take effect to-day, was generally discussed, and the men again pledged themselves to work for no master until the "Merchants' Union" shall have effected an agreement with the 'Longshoremen's Union. Great good will was expressed toward Captain Trudelle, of the French Transatlantic steamer France, for the sympathy shown by him to the men on strike, and for his discharge of all Italians employed on his vessel. The delegates were very hopeful in the anticipation that the elevator men and sewers of grain bags will join them in their strike, and if they do they claim that the steamship companies cannot load grain as they at present intend doing. As usual, the most bitter language was used toward the Walsh Brothers, the stevedores, who were stigmatized as petty tyrants. It remains to be seen to-day what the effect of the general strike will be, as the men believe that it will break up the "Merchants' Union" within twenty-four hours. Great enthusiasm was excited by the news from Hoboken that their brethren there were determined to carry out the fight to the bitter end.

The Strike in Hoboken.

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the 'longshoremen was held in Odd Fellows' Hall yesterday. Reference was made to the great strike, which is to commence to-day, in glowing terms; and it was resolved to enter heart and soul into the movement to resist to the last the action of the combined steamship companies. The fate of the poor men in Hoboken is certainly a hard one, for they have never been as well remunerated as their New York brothers. The general feeling among them is one of obstinate resistance, but there are some among them who object to the blind and slavish submission of the laborers to the dictation of would-be leaders. The police are taking every precaution to prevent disturbance.

ACCIDENT ON FIFTH AVENUE.

The wheeler of a tandem team attached to a dog cart containing Mr. and Mrs. Collins, of No. 34 West Thirty-eighth street, fell yesterday afternoon while going through Fifth avenue, putting the lady for a time in imminent danger of injury. She managed to secure herself by holding on to the back of the rear seat until the servants from one of the neighboring mansions went to her assistance. After a few minutes' delay the horses were calmed, righted and harnessed, and Mr. and Mrs. Collins were able to resume their drive. No injury of any kind was caused by the accident.

THE DEATH OF LAWRENCE HYLAND.

In relation to the death of Lawrence Hyland, who, on Saturday night last, was found lying in the alleyway of the tenement house No. 148 East Forty-second street, suffering from a fractured skull and in a dying condition, there seems to be more ground for suspicion than was at first supposed. Within a day or two past, Captain McElwain, of the Twenty-first precinct, has received information which led him to suspect that David O'Brien, a blind man and, his son David, inmates of the house where Hyland was found, had something to do with causing his death.

Bernard Murray, and his son John, occupying rooms in the same building, on being questioned in regard to the matter, at first made statements which went to show that the O'Briens had abused and badly beaten Hyland while he was drunk in Forty-second street, on Saturday night. The Murrays afterwards contradicted their statements and pleaded entire ignorance about deceased having been beaten. In order that the case might be thoroughly investigated, Captain McElwain and his officers, on Wednesday night, arrested the two O'Briens, and yesterday Coroner Eickhoff committed them to the Tombs. The Coroner also committed the Murrays to the House of Detention.

THE NEWARK RING TRIALS.

To-day, in the Essex Court of Quarter Sessions, at Newark, the trial will be begun of Alderman William Stainsby and ex-Commissioner Joseph C. Young, on an indictment for conspiracy to defraud the city in the matter of taking land for opening Fourteenth street.

A motion was argued last spring before the Supreme Court at Trenton to quash the indictment. The Court recently denied the motion and directed the trial to proceed.

The Prosecutor considers the case of the State so strong that he has determined to try the case alone, without calling in the services of the Attorney General, as in the former conspiracy trial, although the defence have retained an array of the ablest legal talent in the State. As may readily be imagined, the trial is looked for with deep interest in all Newark circles.

FIRE IN A GREENHOUSE.

A fire in the greenhouse of Charles Amma, on Eighth avenue, near 131st street, caused damage to the building and plants to the extent of $1,000. No insurance.

TROTTING AT FLEETWOOD PARK.

The weather was delightful yesterday for driving, and many were out to enjoy the country air. A goodly number assembled at Fleetwood Park to witness the trotting contests announced to come off. Three events were on the card besides the unfinished trot of the previous day.

It will be remembered that on Wednesday, in the sweepstakes, Tommy Moore had scored two heats, Bricks two, and Humpty Dumpty one, when darkness came on. When the race was called on yesterday Tommy Moore was the favorite at 3 to 1. He soon settled the question by winning the sixth heat and race.

The first regular trot of the day was for a purse between John Murphy's sorrel gelding Sorrel Jake and T. Lee's bay gelding Judge Bedle. The betting was in favor of Jake at 2 to 1 before the start. He won the race in three straight heats.

The second event was a match between G. Walker's brown mare Lady Annie and J. H. Phillips' bay mare Susie Clay. Lady Annie was the favorite at 2 to 1 before the start, and after losing the first heat she still had the call. The second heat was also won by Susie Clay, and then the latter sold for the highest price. Lady Annie afterward went to the front and won the third, fourth and fifth heats.

The third trot was between C. Simmons' brown gelding Cheston and J. Peterson's gray mare Cora F. There was no betting on this race, and it afforded very little interest to the spectators. Cheston won in three straight heats. The following are the DEERFOOT PARK.

The day on the turf in Brooklyn was appropriately and pleasantly passed at Deerfoot Park, where 400 persons gathered to witness the events on the programme. First of these was a purse of $50 for horses that had never beaten three minutes; mile heats, best three in five, in harness; $25 to the first, $15 to the second and $10 to the third horse. Of six entries, five came for the word—Mike Rogers' bay gelding Chief, Mr. Harper's bay gelding Harper, William S. Thoms' bay gelding Dick Goodwin, John Hayes' brown gelding Battery Boy and Larry Powers' brown stallion Aleck. In the opening pools Chief was the favorite, but before the start the field on an average brought $24, Aleck $12. Dick Goodwin won the first heat, more by Thoms' good driving than by the superior speed of his horse; but Aleck still remained the choice against the field. The confidence of his friends was fully justified, as he went off and captured the second, third and fourth heats and the race. Dick Goodwin took second money and Chief third premium.

Next on the cards was a running event, match of $50, between Mike Rogers' sorrel gelding Cable and Mr. Gates' bay gelding Buffalo Bill, quarter mile heats, best three in five. Buffalo Bill was the favorite, but Cable proved the victor, although a misunderstanding regarding the manner in which the race was made caused the judges to declare all outside bets off.

A walking match took place at noon between John Meagher and Joseph Lecky, both of Brooklyn. The distance was four miles and the stakes $25 a side. Lecky proved the winner, beating Meagher out over a quarter of a mile. Time, 41:50¼.

OBITUARY.

James Gall, the Scotch Publisher.

[From the Edinburgh (Daily) Review, Nov. 16.]

Our obituary contains the name of a well known citizen of Edinburgh—Mr. James Gall, of the firm of Gall & Inglis, publishers—who has passed away at the venerable age of ninety-one. The good old man had been confined to his house, and latterly to his bed, for a long period; but nothing could exceed the cheerfulness and serenity, begotten of assured Christian confidence, which distinguished his closing years, as they had long marked his active life. He sunk to rest without pain or conflict of any kind, dying, as it would seem, of sheer old age. Although for many years Mr. Gall has ceased to take any part in public affairs his name will be long remembered in connection with the Sabbath schools and printing for the blind, in both of which he took a deep interest, and, in the history of both of which it may be said that his labors formed an important era. The first came prominently into public notice about fifty years ago, as a reformer of Sabbath school teaching and a daring innovator on the old stereotyped methods of religious instruction. At that time nearly the whole business of the Sabbath school was the hearing of the children repeat portions of Scripture and the Shorter Catechism which had been committed to memory during the week. There was no attempt to make the children understand what they had learned, much less to turn it to any practical account. The great object at that time was to get the children to learn by rote the Shorter Catechism and as much of the Bible as possible, and it used to be considered a great feat when any of them succeeded in committing to memory the whole of the 119th Psalm.

Adrian W. Smith.

Adrian W. Smith, cashier of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and formerly a teller in the Manhattan Bank of this city, died in Roselle, N. J., at a quarter past nine o'clock, on Wednesday evening, from exhaustion, consequent upon losing his left leg by a railroad accident at Elizabeth, on Tuesday afternoon, when he attempted to board a moving train. The funeral will take place from the residence of the deceased, at Roselle, near Elizabeth, on Saturday, at half-past one P. M. Mr. Smith was a Free Mason of high degree and was very popular throughout a wide circle of acquaintances.

Alexander Jones, a Canadian Veteran.

A telegram from Amherstburg, C. W., under date of November 26, reports as follows:—Alexander Jones, an old and respected citizen, died last night. He served in the rebellion of 1837–38; was at Point au Pelee and at the taking of the schooner Ann.

Rev. Asa Hill, D. D.

Rev. Asa Hill, D. D., formerly editor of the American Dental Recorder, and one of the foremost citizens of Western Connecticut, died at Norwalk, Conn., instantly, of heart disease, early yesterday morning.

A CONFIDENCE OPERATOR CAPTURED.

About two weeks ago a servant in the employ of Judge Bosworth, at No. 458 West Twenty-second street, having determined to leave, advertised for a place. The day the notice appeared a man called at the Judge's house to see the girl, and having agreed to take her requested that she would go up stairs and get a certificate of character from some of the ladies of the house. Bridget did as desired, but on returning to the basement she discovered that the man had left, taking with him about $600 worth of silverware. Information of the robbery was sent to the Police Central Office and Captain Irving instructed all his men to keep a sharp lookout for a man answering the description given by the girl. Last evening Detective Henry Avery was passing through Washington square, and there discovered what he supposed to be the thief in question. On arresting him and taking him to headquarters he was found to have on a suit of clothes stolen from a Mr. Fox, of No. 94 East Ninth street. He also gave his name when first arrested as Frederick Nichol, the same that he announced himself to Judge Bosworth's servant.

He was locked up, and will have a hearing at the Tombs this morning.

OUT OF TOWN.

In Brooklyn, Westchester, Staten Island and Long Island.

Thanksgiving Day was observed yesterday throughout the city as a holiday. In fact, the observance of the festivity was more general among all classes than ever before. The public offices were closed, the dread neighborhood of the "bulls" and "bears" was as peaceful as a May day morning, and all business down town was suspended. Even the shipping in the harbor, with the wharves and docks shorn of their busy throngs of 'longshoremen and noisy crowds of working sailors, and with not a creak of a windlass breaking the silence of South or West streets along their whole length, seemed to wear a lazy, don't care holiday look. For a wonder the retailers uptown on the avenues had their shutters up, and were themselves the greater part of the day among the church-goers or those who were merrymaking.

"Old Prob" had much to do in ma ng the day as enjoyable as it was, and if he had been specially petitioned beforehand for he could not have done better, for the weather that prevailed was truly delightful. There are people who say Thanksgiving Day doesn't seem like Thanksgiving at all when they can't feel the crisp snow crackle under their feet as they go to church and the music of the sleigh bells jingling in their ears, but these over-particular folk are mostly all "Down Easters" who "when to hum" on Thanksgiving Day couldn't avoid having snow banks in the streets of their villages if they wanted to; but it is pretty certain, judging from the way everybody in the city appeared to enjoy himself and herself yesterday, that the clear sky, the bright sun, the bracing air and the summery atmosphere in which everything seemed to move and have its being went to make up the full measure of the desires of the most exacting fine-weather wishers.

Although by the Wednesday eastward bound trains fully 50,000 persons must have left the city to help with the old folk they were not missed in the general crowds which after dinner sauntered in the Parks and on the avenues, for all the town seemed out of doors, and for every New Englander who went home there were ten persons from the country who came to see the sights and enjoy themselves generally. Indeed, judging from the number of country people dressed in their best who were met with at every turn in the Central Park with ample baskets on their arms, many of the strangers brought their turkey and cranberry sauce along with them, probably with the view of avoiding the expense of a city dinner, in order to have all the more small change to spend at the theatres and shows. All the churches, generally, which were open for service were well attended in the forenoon. There were sermons at most of them, but, as Thanksgiving sermons are rather a worn-out article, it is more than likely that those who went to church for form's sake, as the majority did, and got no sermonizing, were not very much saddened by the circumstance.

It is almost needless to speak of that followed the church going, for every family that was able to have a turkey had one with the usual accompaniments; but where the real enjoyment of the turkey dinners made the most impression was among the poor in the public and private institutions, who, but for the great charitable hearts who are so numerous in this city, would have had no extraordinary Thanksgiving dinner at all. The little orphans and half orphans, the fallen women who have been rescued from a life of shame and gathered in the "refuges;" the aged women in the private asylums, without kith or kin; the newsboys, the inmates of the prisons and hospitals, the poor friendless girls and boys that are so kindly cared for at the various "homes," the crippled and the maimed, old and young, to many of whom existence has been and is destined to be, so long as it lasts, a grim, working —— all were given a chance to enjoy a good, plentiful dinner, made all the more palatable by being served out by sweet-faced women, whose main aim in life seems to be to do good to others. At all the institutions, public as well as private, during the dinners and the after enjoyments, many of those who had liberally contributed to the purchasing of the good things to eat and drink dropped in to see how the good, big and little folk were getting along, and certainly none of them who saw the rows of happy, ruddy faces that lined the long tables and heard the cheering voices of the little boys and girls, who never knew what it was to have a home and a mother's gentle care, could have gone away without feeling that in being the cause of happiness to others we but increase our own tenfold.

THE MISCELLANEOUS.

There were, of course, during the day the usual parades by target companies and fantastical bands. The latter are always the Thanksgiving delight not only of the street Arabs, but of the little ones generally, and so whenever the grotesquely-dressed paraders, with painted and masked faces, put in an appearance with their band, consisting of a squeaking fife and a tin pan for a drum, they were preceded and followed from block to block by entire brigades of ragged youngsters, yelling and screaming, while the more fortunate toddlers in the grand houses along the line of march peered out of the windows in groups, with faces all aglow with excitement. In the evening the theatres were crowded. The day, in point of fact, was everywhere a thorough holiday, than which a more enjoyable one has not occurred in years.

AT THE INSTITUTIONS.

Home for the Aged.

In Sixty-eighth street, between Fourth and Lexington avenues, is the Baptist Home for the Aged. It is a plain brick commodious structure, and at present accommodates sixty old people of both sexes. No more admirable institution exists in this city, and yesterday it was a positive pleasure to see its venerable inmates sit round the plenteous tables at dinner time, waited upon by some of the most prominent ladies in the city, and enjoy their Thanksgiving dinner. The old people looked happier than usual, though to some of them, perhaps, the occasion recalled memories of sunny days in the far past or friends long since departed. The dinner consisted of turkey, roast beef and mutton, vegetables and trimmings, winding up with a dessert of ice cream and fruit. Mrs. Murphy, one of the directresses of the institution, and Mr. Palmetier, Superintendent, were indefatigable in their efforts to make the occasion as pleasant and agreeable as possible. Mrs. D. C. Hayes, President of the society, also assisted with characteristic benevolence in making the old people happy. Many other ladies were similarly kind and charitable.

The Sheltering Arms.

At this institution, corner of Tenth avenue and 129th street, everything was in the free and easy order. All the children, about seventy boys and as many girls, were exquisitely neat and bright. They are divided off into what are termed cottages, or sections, and each cottage has its particular rooms, thus making as many families as there are cottages. A very comfortable dinner was furnished, chicken fricassee, however, taking the place of the stereotype turkey. But the absence of the latter biped did not seem to be felt by the children, judging from their keen appetites.

House of the Good Shepherd.

Thanksgiving Day was not signalized by any unusual exercises at this institution, at the foot of Eighty-ninth street, East River. Contrary to expectation, friends of the inmates failed to send contributions of turkey, chicken and other characteristic edibles of the day that lend such charm to this time-honored occasion. It was hopefully suggested that the deficiency would be amply made up at the Christmas holidays. There are at present in the institution 250 "penitents," 150 "class of detention" and 84 "Magdalens."

Union Home and School.

The day was passed very pleasantly at the Union Home and School for Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans, corner of the Grand Boulevard and 151st street. There were no formal exercises in the chapel, but in their place free and easy romping and unrestrained enjoyment. The institution contains at present 185 children, of whom sixty-five are girls. It was a pleasant sight to see their heartfelt satisfaction in sitting down to the discussion of their turkey, pie, fruit, &c. They have accomplished a great many things at this institution since last Thanksgiving. A shoe shop, which has been built, is now carried on by some of the boys, under the direction of one of their number, and furnishes all the shoes of the establishment. The bread baking is also done by the boys. There is a class of boys studying telegraphy under an efficient instructor, and also a class of boys and girls learning phonography. The brass band cleared during the year over $1,000.

The House of Mercy.

It must have been a pleasing sight yesterday to Miss Kimball and her lady associates, who have devoted so much of their time to this noble institution, to see the way the poor girls under their charge enjoyed their Thanksgiving dinner. There is, perhaps, no charity in this city that deserves more encouragement and support than that which undertakes the reformation of the fallen, as it is a labor that requires so much patient perseverance, having so many nearly hopeless cases to cure. Yesterday morning Dr. Seymour, the chaplain, arrived early, and at eight A. M. the girls assembled in the beautiful chapel and opened the day with a choral service. At eleven A. M. a second service was held, and at one P. M. they all sat down to a most bountiful repast and indulged in annual turkey. There are at present about eighty inmates of the House of Mercy, at the foot of West Eighty-sixth street, all of whom are under twenty-five years of age. The institution is supported by private subscriptions, bequests, &c., &c., and is in a prosperous condition.

The Home of the Friendless.

The lady managers of the Home of the Friendless, on Thirtieth street, between Madison and Fourth avenues, had a busy time yesterday ministering to the wants of their little ones. This institution has been in existence for over forty years, and for the last twenty-six has occupied the present premises. They have now a family of from 130 to 140 children that they take care of; but yesterday being an extraordinary occasion, they fed over 400. After dinner the children went through a series of exercises, including singing, calisthenics, &c., and some of the visitors made a few appropriate remarks. This benevolent work is supported by private contributions, bequests, and occasionally receives an appropriation from the State. Besides the main building on Thirtieth street, the lady managers have eleven district schools, situated in the destitute districts, directly under their control. The children belonging to those schools will eat their Thanksgiving dinner on some other day when the lady managers can find time to look after their wants. The children looked bright and happy yesterday, and a large party of lady and gentlemen visitors were moving around in their midst, doing all in their power to keep the little ones amused. The lady managers expect to have a very severe strain on their treasury this winter, as already the demands from destitute families, really worthy of help, are more than they can attend to. They say the rich will have ample opportunity this season of applying a little of their surplus wealth to good account, as there is need of all they subscribe or contribute. The Rose Memorial Chapel School, an institution under the same management and situated on Forty-first street, near Ninth avenue, has made arrangements to dine 500 children next Saturday, at noon.

St. Joseph's Home.

Of the many charitable institutions in this city there is perhaps none that afford such material benefit as that given by the Sisters of Charity in charge of St. Joseph's Home, at No. 209 West Fifteenth street. There are at present in the home between 160 and 170 old ladies, the majority of whom are friendless and penniless. The institution is supported nearly entirely by subscriptions and donations of provisions, and as there is the interest on a debt of $80,000 to be paid any aid will be gratefully acknowledged. More than half of the inmates do not contribute toward their maintenance and many pay only a nominal sum. The home is, in truth, an orphanage for those who have fallen into their second childhood and where they are cared for with a daughter's love. Yesterday was one of their annual holidays, and the Sisters gave them an excellent Thanksgiving dinner, which was provided entirely from their own resources. In the afternoon and evening the old ladies were visited by their friends and passed quite a pleasant time.

The Ladies' Aid Society.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church gave their old people the usual Thanksgiving dinner in their home on Forty-second street, near Eighth avenue. This benevolent institution has now eighty-six old lady and six old gentleman inmates, and expects three more before the end of the week. Their utmost capacity, straining every point to make room, will allow them to take in about 100, not over, and therefore the lady managers are anxious, if possible, to extend the work that they have so faithfully carried on. The society will very shortly have been in existence twenty-five years, and as they gradually extended their operations from the time they started with a capital of $42 till to-day, when they own their home and lot and take care of a hundred, they are still anxious to move forward, and think it would be a good time for their friends and the churches to come forward and by their timely assistance enable them to increase their operations. Although this society relieves the aged and infirm there is no limit to the age of the candidates for admission, as the young are taken in when too infirm to work. The scene at the dinner was very interesting, and the old people appeared thoroughly to enjoy the good things that were put before them. The society feel grateful to their many friends, as at their last donation party they collected $300 in cash and received a large quantity of groceries and goods, presents of a very acceptable nature. After dinner yesterday many friends of the old people called to see them, and they passed quite a pleasant time talking over old scenes and recollections.

The Midnight Mission.

At this institution, in Winthrop place, a kindly greeting was extended to the wretched unfortunates who cared to take advantage of the helping hand put out for them and enjoy home comforts for at least one day in the year. The matron, Mrs. Hill, busied herself actively all day in attending to the wants of those who were in the Mission House. There were twenty-three present yesterday, and these were served at one o'clock with a substantial repast, in which the finer luxuries of the table were not absent. Two hotels—the Fifth Avenue and the St. Nicholas—had contributed the most costly portion of the feast, such as the turkeys, and the remainder was the contribution of the house itself. That the meal was thoroughly enjoyed there is almost no necessity of saying, and, despite misery, shame and all the other ills these women are popularly supposed to suffer, their appetites had not failed them in the slightest degree. The afternoon was passed quietly, and the evening was devoted to a little musical entertainment provided by the matron, and which made a fitting and charming end to a quiet and enjoyable day.

St. Vincent's Home.

At the St. Vincent's Home for Boys in Warren street there was bustle and stir all day long, and the expectancy of a feast brought together an unusual crowd of lean, anxious, hungry faces which were a study in themselves to see. To the street Arab Thanksgiving is the day of days, and is waited for impatiently during the whole year. Turkey is a luxury almost at any time (in winter), but turkey once a year becomes literally such a rata avis that its succulence is added to a hundred-fold and is more precious than the wealth of India's coral strand. A pleasant little service was held before the dinner and Father Drumgoole made an address as to general goodness and the way in which boys should go, which must have been a sort of purgatory to the boys themselves, whose empty stomachs cried more loudly for refreshments than their minds. It was a treat in itself to see them all turn their heads as anybody would ascend the stairs in the hope of the long expected dinner to be announced. At length it was, and then the rush was something resembling in irresistible impetuosity the force of a human Niagara. It must be confessed that the dinner was good—turkey and plum pudding being its main elements. Every boy had his fill—there was plenty for even the 250 who sat down to table, and it was all very good. During the afternoon some music was discoursed and made a pleasant divertisement.

Water Street Mission.

At the above place, No. 273 Water street (formerly "Kit Burns' rat pit"), there was a dinner given to the inmates—consisting at present of thirteen women—at one o'clock. The traditional Thanksgiving turkey and accompaniments were served, but only a few persons unconnected with the mission were present. In the evening, at five o'clock, the Superintendent, Rev. W. H. Boole, dined there and services were conducted.

Ladies' Home Mission.

This admirable society occupies the building on the site of the famous "Old Brewery" at the Five Points, and where once red-handed murder stalked now dove-eyed mercy dwells. The Thanksgiving dinner yesterday, and the exercises preceding and succeeding it, will long be remembered by the participants, patrons and visitors. The usual turkey, mince pies and toothsome things were provided for the waifs, and it is estimated that first and last during the day over twelve hundred persons partook of the mission hospitality. The programme of the exercises is too lengthy to copy here. It consisted of singing, prayer, speeches, calisthenic exercises, &c., the performance of the infant class being especially excellent under the leadership of Miss Susie McEvoy, a young lady teacher who was brought up in the institution. At three o'clock the senior class dined, and after them the outside public. This morning, at nine o'clock, the remains of the Thanksgiving feast will be distributed to the poor, thus rounding and completing the merciful charity.

Five Points House of Industry.

The day at this benevolent home was a continuous flow of the nectared sweets of charity. Early in the morning the waifs of the locality gathered about the building in Worth street, and long before the hour appointed for the exercises they crowded the aisles and rooms in which were grouped the blessed almoners of the institution. A little before twelve o'clock the teacher of the juvenile class marshalled the little ones, numbering about 500, to the chapel, where a most interesting programme was carried out. The bright, happy faces of the children bore pleasant testimony to the sweet charity which was humanizing and elevating them, while the singing and speeches were equally creditable to the patient and gentle-voiced teachers. About one o'clock the repast was partaken of on the top floor of the building, and the little ones soon played havoc with the turkeys, mince pies and accompanying dainties, amid general jubilation. A group of happy benevolents looked on the scene of festivity, and if the incense from the cheered hearts of the children did not reach their own it was not because the bubbling laughter and childish glee were wanting. Indeed, there was a rhythm of music in the air, a wave of infantile gladness only to be measured by heartbeats—thanksgiving everywhere!

The Howard Mission.

This splendid charity and "Home of the Little Wanderers" gave their annual Thanksgiving dinner yesterday to the poor children and others claiming their benevolence. Nothing could be more interesting than the preliminary musical exercises under the direction of Miss Lewis, assisted by several lady volunteers. About 400 children of the primary classes engaged in the exercises, between the hours of eleven and twelve, after which they marched in a serio-comical but orderly manner to the tables, which were supplied bountifully with turkey and pie, pickles, bread and the usual dainties provided by the benevolence of the friends of this institution, to which they did full justice. From twelve to one o'clock the junior class partook of dinner, and from four to half-past five the senior Bible class, numbering eighty-five young women, and ranging in age from eighteen to twenty-five years, enjoyed the hospitality of the Mission. In the evening the parents of the children and the senior Bible class of young men, under the care of that untiring and zealous missionary, Miss S. Oliffe, were entertained. Altogether it was a day to make glad the hearts of Christians, and it was pleasant to learn that in the midst of this great city such a splendid charity is doing its noble human work. Mr. A. S. Hatch, the banker; Messrs. William Phelps, H. E. Tompkins, J. F. Wyckoff and others are active workers in the benevolent cause, and no one can see this beehive of charity without wishing to share some of the honey of self-content which such sweet labor must provide.

The Newsboys' Home.

The newsboys' new and splendid building, at the corner of New Chambers and Duane streets, which has already been fully described in these columns, resounded yesterday with the boisterous laughter and riotous caperings for which our newsboys are so famous. Children always enjoy themselves if they have something good to eat, and more especially if they can fall to without having first to listen to two or three long winded sermons, which they probably do not ever understand. The Superintendent of the Newsboys' Home had gathered yesterday his numerous flock of little Arabs round him and gave them as much good turkey and vegetables and pie as they could eat, which is saying a good deal, for newsboys have famous appetites, and they did full justice to the repast. Many of them had taken some of their savings out of their box—for the Superintendent sees to it that every one who can lays by a little money—to purchase new clothing, and appeared yesterday neat and comfortably clad, looking very unlike the shoeless, ragged urchins they had been only the day before. It was a gratifying sight to see so many poor and homeless waifs spend a day of rest and enjoyment.

The Girls' Lodging House.

The Girls' Lodging House, at No. 27 St. Mark's place, under the charge of Mrs. Hurley, was the scene of much merriment yesterday. It is a haven of refuge for friendless girls, whence they generally emerge to take good situations in service or otherwise. On Wednesday night forty girls slept at the house, but as six of these were invited by friends or patrons to spend the day with them there remained only thirty-four to enjoy the festive dinner set before them by Mrs. Hurley. The table was decorated with most unique flowers, mainly turnips, carrots, beets, &c., cut into flower shapes by the girls' cunning hands. So admirably was this artistic task accomplished that many practised eyes were actually deceived and thought the vegetables before them were really flowers. In the evening there was tea, followed by a joyous reunion, at which games of forfeits, blindman's buff, turning the plates, &c., were played with much zest. The occasion was rendered especially interesting by the visits of several girls now in good situations but formerly inmates of the house, who came to spend the day with their old companions in misfortune.

The Juvenile Guardian Society.

At the Juvenile Guardian Society, No. 101 East Eighth street, some 275 boys and girls between the ages of five and fifteen enjoyed their Thanksgiving turkey. The children were not only well provided for as far as their material wants were concerned, but their spiritual needs were also not neglected, no less than three reverend gentlemen delivering addresses, which were replete with the highest teachings of morality and religion. The children attending the Industrial School of the society belong, for the greater part, to the poorer classes, and receive relief in the shape of clothing, shoes, &c., which enables them to obtain the instruction from which the mere want of these articles had otherwise debarred them. The Secretary, the Rev. Mr. Robertson, said many of the children were those of Protestant parents who objected to the Catholic teachers in the public schools of the ward and would rather let them go to the society's school managed by Protestant people. Many of the neglected children who ate their turkey here yesterday looked as though they had stood badly in need of it for some time, and all enjoyed their dinner hugely.

St. Barnabas' Home.

St. Barnaba's Home, in Mulberry street, above the Police Headquarters, was, as is usual on this day, in a perfect state of siege. This institution is a place of refuge for homeless girls of respectability, besides affording to poor children the advantages of a sewing school, free reading room and even of a nursery, where mothers out at work can leave their little ones. There was an enormous crowd of little boys and girls at the door, each waiting for his or her turn to go in to dinner. The number which could be fed at one time was extremely small, so that it took from one till five to satisfy the hunger of all the poor children. The matron, however, with her good tact, provided for the wants of all, and every one went away satisfied. The menu was not extensive, consisting of turkey, vegetables and pies; but few gourmands at Delmonico's enjoyed their Thanksgiving feast as much as did these children the bounty of the Sisterhood of the Good Shepherd. About 700 children partook of dinner, which is the number usually fed on Thanksgiving Day at this institution. In the evening there was no special celebration of the day.

AT THE ORPHAN ASYLUMS.

The Colored Orphan Asylum.

The Colored Orphan Asylum is situated on the Boulevard at 143d street. It is a large and handsomely built brick building, containing all modern improvements. It supports 180 boys and 100 girls—all colored orphans. A HERALD reporter called on the superintendent, Mr. O. K. Hutchinson, yesterday, between one and two o'clock, and was shown by that gentleman almost every portion of the building. The youngsters had just left the large, clean refectory after gobbling up as many as thirty-five turkeys, and two smart little fellows were arranging the tables and spreading the cloths for supper. Besides turkey, the orphans were supplied with ham, pies and vegetables, including sweet potatoes. In the morning after breakfast Mr. Hutchinson collected them all into the school hall—a very neat room, well decorated with all necessary apparatus—and there read to them the President's proclamation which had the good effect of furnishing them with a splendid holiday. After this the children sang a Thanksgiving hymn, followed by several other anthems, and then proceeded to the playground to sharpen their appetites by leaping and running and tossing and jumping about, very many wearing ready-made masks, unsuitable clothing, awry and laughable, and many other kinds of the Thanksgiving insignia. On the whole the colored boys on the summit of Manhattanville Hill had a first rate time of it yesterday, and rollicked the hours away to advantage.

Protestant Half-Orphan Asylum.

The Protestant Half-Orphan Asylum in West Tenth street, an institution which has been established since 1835, treated its little inmates yesterday with due consideration and attention. Breakfast was served out at the usual hour to 220 hopeful-looking boys and girls. The usual bill of fare was greatly altered for the better at dinner, when over twenty large turkeys were dissected in the dining room and gobbled up with much avidity. The matron of the asylum, Mrs. R. P. Hudson, with the two directresses, Mrs. George D. Phelps and Mrs. William G. Bull, were in attendance, superintending the good work and encouraging the children to a hearty meal of turkey, chicken, beef pies, oranges, apples and peanuts. Everything passed off beautifully for the little ones. They talked and masticated simultaneously ab oro ad malum, and then took to romping and tossing about in the play yard until the supper bell rang, when their recuperated appetites were again satisfactorily appeased.

Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum.

At the Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum of St. Patrick's Cathedral, in Prince street, which is under the generous and vigilant care of the Sisters of Charity, 183 very neat, clean and healthy looking children were excellently provided for yesterday. Breakfast was served out at seven o'clock, under the direction of the Superioress, Sister Mary Francis. A good supply of meat and soups was given the children at this meal. This, of course, is not usual nor necessary on ordinary days, but yesterday was a grand exception. At dinner three or four kinds of meat were disposed of, including the inevitable turkeys, which were on the whole justly dealt with. The process of recuperation commenced at twelve o'clock, and continued until one o'clock in the afternoon, when oranges, nuts, apples, candies and so forth became the order of the remaining portion of the day. The children of this asylum were positively neat and healthy, and yet the good Sisters had to confess, in answer to the reporter, that the rich folks of the city forgot to make a single present to the institution.

Fifteenth Street Orphan Asylums.

In connection with St. Patrick's Orphan Asylum, and under the same direction and supervision, are the two Roman Catholic orphan asylums in Fifteenth street, on Fifth and Madison avenues, and next blocks to the new cathedral. In these two institutions 1,000 orphans were served with turkey, beef, pork, sweet potatoes and vegetables yesterday. The boys' institution is under the direction of Sister Anne Boromeo, and the girls' institution under the care of Sister Clotilda. It is a very hard task to control 1,000 children and do justice to all, but these Sisters look upon it only as something easy and delightful. The girls' asylum is an enormous new brick building. In each institution there are two refectories and all other necessaries, affording all modern advantages. After dinner hour yesterday playing and romping around with unrestrained merriment was the order of the evening. At seven o'clock P. M. the advanced girls gave an entertainment, at which many visitors and donors were present. The good children thus arrayed in costume sung Thanksgiving hymns, and showed their contentment in their merry freaks of unbounded pleasure.

Catholic Foundling Asylum.

This worthy asylum, presided over by Sister Irene, yesterday provided a Thanksgiving dinner of chicken and vegetable accompaniments for 350 little foundlings and ninety mothers, and "it really did one's heart good," in the words of the kind Sister, "to see the little things at the table." After the dinner was over an assortment of candy, provided by some charitable ladies, was distributed among them, and the poor little creatures stuck their hands, faces and hair up with the sweets to their heart's content.

AT THE HOSPITALS.

Bellevue Hospital.

Warden Brennan, always thoughtful for the unfortunates under his care at Bellevue Hospital, provided them with a most luxurious dinner. Turkey was the only thing that did not garnish the Thanksgiving table, that being a regulation dish for Christmas alone. Mr. Morris, the storekeeper of the hospital, employed twenty-five women nearly the whole night of Wednesday to peel and boil 1,000 pounds of pumpkins and innumerable barrels of apples and make them into pies for the feeding of the 750 people who looked to the Commissioners of Charities and Correction for a good dinner on Thursday. Nor were those who were unable to sit at the table forgotten. The patients, through a committee, sent to the Warden their thanks for his kindness.

Ninety-Ninth Street Hospital.

At this hospital, also under the charge of the Commissioners of Charities and Correction, nearly 400 persons were fed. The dinner was of the same kind as provided at the other places, and, to use the words of one of the officers of the institute, "It did one's heart good to see the poor creatures eat."

The Park Hospital.

This institution, also under the same care, was not forgotten, and the few in it who were able to enjoy the extras that were provided for them did so with a relish, and blessed the kind Providence who made charity the greatest virtue of three.

Institute for Crippled Children.

At this institution, Forty-second street and Madison avenue, a most luxurious dinner was provided by the Superintendent, Mr. Averill, consisting of turkey, chicken, a plentiful supply of vegetables, ice cream, pies, cake and fruit. Two hundred and fifty little cripples sat down to the table, and, after a blessing from the Father of all good and perfect gifts had been asked, the little ones fell to with a will. In the evening a hymn of thanks was sung by them, and no one who heard it could doubt the gratitude that reigned in those little hearts toward the kind citizens of New York who never forget them.

The Women's Hospital.

This institution, situated on the corner of Madison avenue and Fifty-second street, is cared for by the ladies of New York, and most careful are they of their charges. Two hundred unfortunates sat down to a Thanksgiving dinner yesterday, consisting of turkey and what a celebrated gourmand once called "its trimmings." Nearly thirty other individuals had to be fed here also; but, as they do not masticate, the feeding was by a different process.

The Chapin Home.

The inmates of the Chapin Home for Aged and Infirm Women was looked after by Mrs. Abner Mellen, of Fifth avenue, who sent a complete dinner of the choicest viands to the inmates, forty-three in number, and, according to the matron's statement, they did full justice to the lady's worthy charity.

Mount Sinai Hospital.

Dr. Trensch at this hospital provided a most excellent dinner for his charges, eighty-six in number, the dishes being in full accord with the sentiment of the day.

The German Hospital

on Seventy-seventh street, near Fourth avenue, fed a large number yesterday, and the board was decorated with all the delicacies of the season, except that dish so dear to the German heart, "sauerkraut."

Little Sisters Hospital.

In Seventieth street stands this hospital, presided over by the Little Sisters, a band of ladies good and kind almost as the angels, and who by their own efforts succeeded in providing a festal board yesterday for the 200 poor under their care.

TARGET COMPANIES.

The usual turnout of target companies was a conspicuous feature of yesterday's celebration. The weather was propitious and the streets in excellent condition for marching, so that the distinguished soldiery of one day's campaigning were particularly complimented by the clerk whose business it is to look after the movements of the atmosphere. "Fantasticals," representatives of all nationalities, and grotesque characters perambulated the main thoroughfares during the day, creating much laughter and followed by large crowds of ragged urchins and others, who shouted and clamored in the wake of those disciples of Falstaff. The Celtic gentleman was exemplified in blue dress coat, corduroy knee breeches, "brogues" and the inevitable "dudeen." Of course an Irish peasant could not be complete without an attire of this character. Then comes the German burgher, weighing some 400 pounds, and representing King Gambrinus after a lengthy carousal. Men were attired as women, and rode on horseback, costumed in the most ludicrous fashion.

The Fourth and Sixth wards were the headquarters of assemblage for these companies. At ten o'clock they were ready to march, and caused quite a sensation on the line of their march. As to the target companies, many of them went to the small parks and shot for prizes. The great harvest for those one day "soldiers" is in the few weeks preceding election. Many of the companies are organized in the interest of some local politician who fevers to serve the city in the Aldermanic chamber, or legislate for the State in the Assembly. The company being called after the candidate, he is waited upon by a "committay" of the "bhoys," and if he does not "come down" handsomely political annihilation follows, but if he "puts up" properly the company is sure of a day's sport and enjoyment. Yesterday, however, quite a number of those organizations marched through the streets, composed of the business portion of our community, who thus assemble for mutual enjoyment and rivalry.

AT THE PRISONS.

The Day in the Tombs.

The prisoners in the Tombs yesterday had indeed a thanksgiving dinner. Some charitable individual sent 320 pounds of turkey, 114 pounds of chicken, 150 pounds of corned pork, 1 bushel of onions and 150 mince pies for the dinner of the prisoners, upon which they regaled themselves in royal style. Many of the prisoners had friends who brought them turkeys and other delicacies, all of which were received and duly delivered to the keeper, to whom they were presented. In addition to the provender sent by the charitable person spoken of above several barrels of apples and pairs of turkeys were sent by different persons interested in the prison and its occupants. The day was indeed a pleasant one to the unfortunates in the gloomy jail. The turkey, or most of it, as usual, disappeared in a short while, there being no stint as to the amount each prisoner should have.

In Ludlow Street Jail.

The unfortunates in this prison had nothing on the table to remind them of the day of thanksgiving. Comptroller Green has not paid any of the bills of the prison since last January, and as the Warden is busy mandamusing the City Treasurer, he could not provide the kind of a dinner which the prison generally supplies to its inmates on holidays. The dinner yesterday was the same as usual, nothing occurring to suggest a holiday to the prisoner.

At Essex Market Prison.

As regards the provender the same story is to be told of Essex Market Prison. Nothing foreign to the daily regimen was served to the prisoners there yesterday, and, in fact, many of them did not know the day was one of thanksgiving, as everything, including the soup and beef, had its everyday look.

ON THE ISLANDS.

Blackwell's Island.

Cessation from work, giving the day the appearance of Sunday, was about the only marked feature characterizing yesterday's observance of Thanksgiving Day at the various institutions on Blackwell's Island. There was plenty of preaching and good religious counsel, but no admixture of turkey as an agreeable set-off to these didactic discourses. At the charity hospital there were appropriate religious exercises in the chapel, Rev. Father Fetter conducting the services in the morning and Rev. Mr. Bourne in the afternoon. The dinner was the ordinary one, though of course with the usual variations to fulfil the requirements of the respective patients. There are at present 706 patients in the hospital, besides 96 in the charity hospital and 3 in the penal hospital, the whole being under the charge of Dr. Kitchen, formerly of the Utica State Lunatic Asylum. The inmates of the Penitentiary found the day a pleasant one, inasmuch as it relieved them of the tedium of their customary daily toil. This fact probably compensated largely with most for the lack of any extra additions to the bill of fare. There are now 934 prisoners in the institution, of whom 143 are women.

The inmates of the Almshouse, numbering 1,081 persons in both the male and female departments, had the pleasure of listening, at least such as chose, to two very excellent discourses, one by Chaplain Bourne and one by Rev. Mr. French. This was the only variation from the everyday monotony. They had their customary dinner, "only this and nothing more."

At the Workhouse the inmates were given a holiday, but no turkey or anything unusual in the gastronomical line. They were also spared the chapel exercises. The house is pretty well filled, numbering 635 men and 626 women on its list of free-workers.

In the Insane Asylum there were appropriate religious exercises and the day made as pleasant as possible to the unfortunate inmates.

Ward's Island.

The Commissioners of Emigration—inasmuch as the funds at their command are at present rather low and as the most of European emigrants have never been in the habit of celebrating Thanksgiving Day, and, in fact, not knowing any such institution in the Old World—determined to make very little of yesterday, but reserve holiday festivals until Christmas and New Year's. Accordingly, at the various institutions on this island under their charge there were no special observances yesterday excepting intermitting the usual week-day work, having religious exercises in the chapel and an exhibition by the school children. The chapel services were conducted respectively by Father Prachensky and Rev. Gustavus Smith. The Sabbath school exercises comprised songs and recitations, and were very interesting. In the hospital there are 880 inmates, some 300 less than a year ago, a fact that Colonel Krehbiel, the superintendent, attributes to there being less emigration than formerly and a better class of emigrants. Besides the admirable feature of a Croton reservoir containing 1,100,000 gallons of water, a new feature has lately been added—the cemetery. Formerly those dying in the institution were buried in the Potters' Field, on Hart's Island. Each grave is numbered and registered, so that a body can be reclaimed by friends at any time.

In the Insane Asylum, of which there are 161 inmates, a mutton stew, instead of roast turkey, was served. There were brief religious exercises, conducted by Rev. Marinus Willett. An unusual number visited the institution, who were shown through with great courtesy by Mr. Lush, the Superintendent.

At the Inebriate Asylum and Soldiers' Retreat there was nothing out of the usual programme except a ball given in the evening by the female servants, at which all the inmates were cordially invited to be present, and which, it is to be presumed, was a most enjoyable affair. There are only 11 inebriates at present in the institution and 210 soldiers. The institution is in charge of Dr. William Hardy.

Randall's Island.

A neat little steamtug under charge of Captain Grace was busily employed yesterday forenoon carrying visitors to Randall's Island. At the House of Refuge, numbering, both boys and girls, some 800 inmates, a sermon was preached by Rev. George H. Smith, the chaplain, after which a fine dinner was served in the large dining room. There was no turkey on the bill of fare, but the repast was of that quality and variety that strongly commended itself to the keen appetites of the juvenile diners. It was a general holiday. There were also appropriate exercises at the Foundling Asylum, Idiot Asylum and other institutions on the island.

IN THE CHURCHES.

Trinity Church.

There was nothing unusual to be observed in the celebration of the day at Trinity church. Of course the usual number of people—"the youth in life's green spring, and he who goes in the full strength of years, matron and maid, and the sweet babe and the gray headed man"—gathered about the grand old structure early in the forenoon and whiled away the hours in meditative contemplation of the crumbling slabs that mark the last resting place of those who, long since, passed beyond the festivities of Thanksgiving. At half-past ten o'clock the bells in the lofty spire peeled forth their merry notes, attracting hundreds of pedestrians who were strolling up and down Broadway and holding them within the charmed circle of their symphonious sound until the last faint echoes of "Merrily Ring the Trinity Bells" had died away upon the ambient atmosphere of the lovely morning.

The following programme on the chimes was announced by Mr. James E. Ayliffe, the organist, and carried out:—

1. Ringing the changes on eight bells.
2. "Hail, Hail this Happy Day."
3. "Closer to Me."
4. "There is a Beautiful World."
5. "Thanksgiving Day."
6. "I Now Believe."
7. "Merrily Ring the Trinity Bells."

No sooner had the bells ceased their throbbing than the soul inspiring tones of the organ came forth, filling the lofty arches of the edifice and stealing out to ravish the ears of the multitude in the surrounding cemetery and adjacent thoroughfare. The church was quickly filled to repletion with for the most part devout men and women, who had come to give thanks for the manifold mercies and numerous blessings showered upon them by a benign Providence. The services were of the customary form upon such occasions, being composed of music aptly selected and gloriously rendered; and when they were completed—when the venerable minister in his robings of white had read the last prayer, when the choir had sung the last anthem and the pulsations of the organ were no longer heard vibrating from pillar to pillar and from arch to arch, the multitude slowly filed through the

* * * massive gateway,
Built up in years gone by,

and returned each to his or her fireside to contemplate the anatomy of some unhappy torn turkey.

St. Thomas' Church.

The Thanksgiving services at this elegant and spacious church, corner of Fifty-third street and Fifth avenue, yesterday morning, were exceedingly well attended. Rev. Dr. Morgan occupied the pulpit. He announced as his text Psalms clxv., 9—"The Lord is good to all, and his tender mercies are over all his works." We feel God's great benevolence, he began, in all His works. Jesus Christ was content to suffer death upon the cross that He might be the instrument for saving sinners. This same spirit of universal benevolence is shown in the works of the Holy Ghost. Upon the universal beneficence of God do we base our offering of thanks to-day. God's mercies are over all His works, and everything receives His blessing. No one can help acknowledging the bounties of God, and every one should be especially thankful for this day. I am of the opinion that many of us do not sufficiently appreciate the blessings which God has placed before us. One great blessing is our government. Despotism cannot live under our skies, for no royal title will save it, and massacre cannot darken our free heavens. All intellectual development should be based upon religious truths. Every crumb of bread and drop of water which falls to our portion Christ purchased for us. He has come near to every one of us, and this is the day to remember Him. He has lifted us all up and put a song upon each lip. Of what avail is it that every star in heaven and each blossom on earth bears witness to the living God if we do not know Him? We stand upon our mother earth ignorant and filled with the knowledge that we must die. Let us lift up our hearts, therefore, to the Son who has saved us by His grace. While all voices are rising in praise to God, and while our dwellings are filled with praises, let us remember the famishing and the helpless who sometimes feel their stay here little to be thankful for.

Christ Church.

The Thanksgiving services at this church yesterday were appropriate and impressive and attracted a large and fashionable assemblage. Moreover, the choral arrangements were admirably carried out and much enhanced the solemnity of the occasion. The musical selections included the "Te Deum," a "Gloria" by Mozart and several joyous hymns, all of which were rendered with excellent effect. The rector, Rev. Hugh Miller Thompson, delivered a lengthened address suitable to the day, taking his text from the eighth chapter of Deuteronomy, seventh, eighth and ninth verses. The reverend gentleman explained the object for which the congregation had assembled, and drew a distinction between holidays set apart by the State and those ordained by the Church. He thought that Thanksgiving Day had in recent years become less religious in its general bearing, and was regarded more as a day of feasting and joyful celebration. Indeed, the proclamations sounded more and more like cant words, and the day was altogether set aside for social and family observances, and not for religious purposes at all. He clearly pointed out the necessity of devoting the occasion to an earnest thanksgiving to God for all the mighty benefits He had conferred upon the nation; for, if we observe it at all, we should observe it in its religious aspect. He traced the history of the country through many important stages, contending that whatever of fame and prosperity it had acquired, whatever success had marked its career, were due solely to God. He was the universal King from whom alone all blessings flowed. His omnipotent hand was seen in the rise and fall of nations, and it were idle to suppose that the power of man had ever worked the destinies of a country. The reverend gentleman, after an elaborate and exhaustive dissertation on this subject, claimed that a government could not be governed except on the principles of religion. The statesman who forgets God was unfit to be trusted, not only with the interests of a great people, but with the smallest division of land. All past history was evidence of this fact. He concluded by calling attention to the individual responsibility attached to each person living under and deriving the benefits of a free republic. The services were brought to a conclusion about half-past twelve o'clock.

Reformed Church.

The South Reformed Dutch church, corner of Fifth avenue and Twenty-first street, was well filled yesterday morning. The pastor, Rev. E. P. Rogers, preached on the "Glory of New York," the text being taken from the twenth-first chapter of Acts, part of the thirty-ninth verse—"A citizen of no mean city." The reverend gentleman said these words were spoken by Paul when attacked by a mob in Jerusalem, and when he was about to be imprisoned by the Romans on a charge of being a disturber of the peace. When questioned as to whether he was not a certain foreigner who on a previous occasion had stirred up strife among the people, he answered:—"I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city; and, I beseech thee, suffer me to speak to the people." Although no man need be ashamed of his country or ancestry who has no reason to be ashamed of himself, yet it is a legitimate subject of thanksgiving to our Heavenly Father that he has chosen to order the circumstances of our birth so advantageously, and I confess I have often thought of the language of St. Paul as applicable to those of us who, like myself, are native citizens of the great metropolis. Every such person can certainly say, "I am a citizen of no mean city," for whatever may be said of New York it cannot truly be said that it is a mean city. There is a great deal said with more or less justice of the poverty and crime, the ignorance and corruption on the one hand, and the luxury, extravagance and dissipation which characterize the different classes of our city; and, doubtless, many good people in the rural districts think that it is a place where life and property are continually unsafe; but there is another side to this picture. There is a great deal about the history of this city; its wondrous growth; its commercial progress; its development in all the elements of greatness—material, social, artistic, educational and philanthropic—for which we may be pardonably proud and for which its citizens should be profoundly grateful. Jefferson was not right when he said that large cities were ulcers on the body politic. There must of course be found there much of the dregs and forces potent for evil as well as potent for good. But there is a great deal said about the virtue of a rural population which is not warranted by facts, and there is a great deal that is good and great and glorious about great cities, although it may be fashionable to call them hotbeds of vice and sinks of corruption. New York has been one of the best abused cities in the world, and as a son of New York and the minister of the first church established on Manhattan Island, I feel that I shall not violate but honor the proprieties of this annual Thanksgiving Day if I pay some grateful tribute to the goodness of God's providence in the history of my native place, and try to show you that every one of its native and adopted citizens may say, with the great Apostle, "I am a citizen of no mean city." Dr. Rogers then gave a most interesting historical sketch, showing the progress of the Empire City from the time when Captain Hudson steered his little ship, the Half Moon, into the Bay of Manhattan, 265 years ago, up to the present, and in conclusion said:—"Look, then, at her wonderful history; consider her matchless elements of power, estimate properly her beauties and deformities, appreciate thoroughly her duties and her dangers, and prove yourselves worthy to be citizens of no mean city. Discard not the conservatism of the old while you glory in the progress of the new. Never change the base which the fathers laid with faith and prayer while you carry the superstructure higher than they ever dreamed of. Welcome all the races of the earth to your generous fellowship, but see that they build with us on the same old foundations of intelligence and Christianity."

St. Francis Xavier's.

At the Jesuits' church in Sixteenth street, known as St. Francis Xavier's, high mass was celebrated at half-past ten o'clock, Rev. Father Dealy acting as celebrant, with Rev. Father Delletier as deacon, and Rev. Father Desjardines as sub-deacon. Rev. Father Merrick delivered the sermon, which was listened to attentively by the large congregation. He sketched in eloquent language the sufferings of the Catholic Church from an early age, the persecutions under the Roman Empire, the German Emperors of the sixteenth century, and down to the present time. He stigmatized the attacks on the Catholic Church as the outgrowth of heresy, infidelity and bigoted teaching. The animosity of Gladstone and Bismarck he particularized as mistakes in an attempt to subordinate conscience to the law of the State. He prophesied that the attempts made by so-called statesmen to upset the Catholic Church would ultimately result in their own overthrow, and that all attempts made against Catholic doctrine, as exemplified in the teachings of Christ, had ever met with overthrow and disaster. Mohammedanism, Arianism and other attacks upon the Catholics had hitherto resulted in defeat. The great Roman Empire for three hundred years had worked energetically against Christian teaching as expounded by Jesus Christ, but ultimately the victory belonged to Rome and nothing could snatch the laurel from where it properly belonged.

Father Merrick's discourse occupied over an hour in its delivery.

Church of the Transfiguration.

High mass, for the members of the Catholic Union, was celebrated at half-past ten o'clock yesterday in the Church of the Transfiguration, Mott street, of which Rev. Father McGean is pastor. The altar was tastefully decorated with flowers and an abundance of wax lights. Rev.

Father Brophy officiated as celebrant, Rev. Father Bary as deacon and Rev. Father McGean as sub-deacon.

The sermon was delivered by Rev. Father Brophy. His remarks were principally directed to a narrative of the sufferings of Pope Pius and the persecutions with which the Church was afflicted at the present time. He alluded with pride to the Emerald Isle as a spot where infidelity and atheism were unknown. The sermon was listened to attentively by the crowded congregation, and the solemn exercises were concluded about one o'clock.

IN THE BROOKLYN CHURCHES.

Plymouth Church.

Thanksgiving Day brought to Plymouth church a much larger congregation than usually gathers together there on this annual celebration. The house was so well filled that nearly every seat was occupied. Mr. Beecher preached one of his characteristic discourses, in which comments on religion, politics and social life were so happily blended as to call forth demonstrative approval, that took the shape of applause and cheers from the audience. The text selected was the fourth chapter of the first epistle of Corinthians, the nineteenth and twentieth verses:—"But I will come to you shortly, if the Lord will; and will know, not the speech of them which are puffed up, but the power; for the Kingdom of God is not in word, but in power." Mr. Beecher said that this was not a mere accidental statement of Paul's, for in the fourth verse of the second chapter were these words:—"And my speech and my preaching were not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of the spirit and of power." It was evident that the apostle meant by "the word" the whole system of teaching. Now the Thessalonian Church had apprehended the mode of the great civilization. The Grecian civilization was remarkable for intellectual development to a larger extent than ever before, and to some extent than has ever been since. They had set before them the great outline of the civilized and material world as science and the æsthetic system of the globe. They were advanced in ethics but not in æsthetics. The apostle makes a large distinction between the kingdom of God and the kingdom of intellectual statement. He regarded this as secondary and instrumental. The kingdom of God did not consist in these truths, but in the essential and fundamental condition of the human mind. The kingdom of God was found in man and not in those things that have been set up to influence men. We are not to understand that we are to regard this teaching with indifference, or to regard the statements of the truth with indifference, but that the results to be sought and the actual gain of such results are of far more importance, and were not to be the gauge of the growth and condition of the kingdom of God.

CONDITION OF CHRISTIANITY.

To-day I will look at the history and condition of the world with regard to the question whether its present condition, as a matter of experience is one of hopefulness or despondency in this direction. In measuring the world I shall use the Apostle's measure. It is certainly useful to know how many churches have been built; how many ministers have been settled; how many missionaries have gone forth; how many converts have been added to the churches; how many Bibles have been distributed; how many tracts have been sent forth as winged messengers? All these things are supposed to be instructive one way or the other. But could any man tell the condition of agriculture in the United States by going into an agricultural warehouse and ascertaining how many ploughs had been made during the year? You must, to form an estimate, have an actual inspection of the farms, and the gardens. Quantity not only, either, but quality must be considered, for it is quality that is the wealth producing power of the soil. So, in looking out on the condition of the world, I regard churches, and all schools, and books as instructors. But the question is not how many instruments had been created, but what upon the whole has been the product and the tendency of so many agencies, and which have been active for so many centuries; what has the power done among the civilized nations of the world; what is the dynamic condition of the intellect and moral sense of Christendom.

WITH RESPECT TO INTELLIGENCE.

Above all other periods in the history of this world this is the age of great intelligence. It may be said to be an age of scientific fervor. The nations are aroused to scientific zeal. There is a vast increase not simply of the facts known, but of the power to know—an educated tendency to investigate and determine. There is a recognition of the power of intelligence such as has never been known in any other period of the history of the world.

HOW THE WORLD IS GOVERNED.

In government, it is not so long ago that it was force and then cunning that were the factors of government. To-day all governments feel that their strength is to make their people intelligent. Education makes strong men for the State, for the army, and education makes stronger men to make men for the treasury. Such men are more easily governed if they are governed rightly. The desire for knowledge has increased among the common people to an extent that has never been known before. The ignorant mass are saying we shall die ignorant but our children shall not. We are beginning to find, after 2,000 years, that truth in Christ shall make us free.

THE MORAL SENSE.

Let us look at the other factor of which he spoke—the moral sense, or the dynamic condition or moral sense of the human brain. We are liable to mistake here in looking at the "word," and not at the "power." Mr. Beecher here spoke of the various meanings attached to the word "revelation." He said:—Revelation is only the unfolding of human life from human experience. All theology is mental philosophy. We cannot understand God except as a great mind. We understand the qualities of truth in men and then attribute them to God and give them infinite proportions. Therefore, every considerable advance in the knowledge of man's mind will be a disturbing force upon theology. It must be so. Everybody now seems to be alarmed because truth is shattered. You must remember that this is what takes place every year in the vegetable world. I go out in June, when the trees are growing and the outside bark is cracking; what is it saying to the bark but "get out of the way." So, when men are learning higher truths, a larger and more triumphant form of statement, they say to those earlier truths, "get out of the way." Churches that are cramped, creed bound and full of lice and vermin must get out of the way. Vitality is the best medicine, as well as the best sense. (Applause.) So churches and theology must conform themselves to a larger statement of truth and justice from the topmost round to the very bottom.

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH.

I believe in the Pope, in archbishops, the bishops, in all his priests, in all his deacons, in all the systems of degrading weakness that have come down in such plenitude from the mediæval ages that have served to furnish a Roman temple. But I deny their right to put their priests upon me when they tell me to worship Jupiter when he has been smoothed out into a Pope, or to worship Venus when they call her the Virgin Mary. When all these things are put upon me with "Thus saith the Lord," then and then only does it concern me. (Applause.)

WHAT A SAPPY TREE ROOT DID.

The ideal of manhood was never higher than it is to-day; never higher than it is to-day in Christendom. We have to-day a conception of the ideal man that reaches down to the bottom of society. The foundation of moral Christianity in the world is to be laid down in the body. If regeneration has got a great deal to do generation has got much to do. There must be to have a higher order of civilization a higher organization of the race. There is no reason why men should be born with a six-inch circumference of the head. For the very beginning of the new heavens and a new earth there is needed new men that shall stand a mental existence of mental strife. Society is full of disturbances, truths that are trying to develop themselves. I remember noticing, not far from my house, a tree with a small sappy root; I watched the growth of that tree, and by and by the large flag stones that pressed down the roots were raised, and they continued to rise, until this little sappy root had so disturbed them that they tilted the pavement, and the great stones had to be adjusted to these roots. So it is with men; you may put upon them as many fly stones as you please in the form of regulations, but society will be tilted on one side unless society adjusts itself to their claims. (Cheers.) Generally speaking society has one gate open. Men have been trying to get in at that gate, but they butt themselves, generally speaking, at the sides, and they die before they find that gate again. (Applause.)

Mr. Beecher here said, on looking at his notes, that he found that he had only got half-way through his sermon, and that he had been talking longer than he intended. There were loud cries of "Go on!" "go on!" and he said, that "a sermon against a church was an unequal fight, but he would go on a little longer."

A HIT AT FREE LOVE.

The family idea is the grand primitive institution of life; it is the grand universal life. No other institution has awakened anything like its strength. It supports all those who are sprung from the father and mother into a model commonwealth, where, by reason of the smallness of the number, they come within the sphere of a parental government that has thus the fundamental idea of laws within a law. Now, I find in this a revelation above all revelation, not of an innumerable company of angels, or archangels, or seraphims, not a dramatic representation of power; but in this family idea God reveals Himself, and in His nature His mode of governing the world, and in the condition of the father and the mother His relation thereto. You might destroy the whole Bible, you have yet the whole germane idea of what the Bible says in the family idea. There is only the one place in the whole world in which we know what it is to govern by love. In this you have the most precious thing that was ever given to us. Now, is the family idea losing or gaining? Gaining. There have been some mischievous, licentious people who have put forth a philosophy that has regarded this view of the family as mischievous. All the moral sense of the race, however, is strong to-day for a monogamic family. The family was never so virtuous and so refined as it is to-day. It takes more to be a husband and a father than it did some hundred years ago.

SOCIETY MOVING RIGHT.

The power of society to move in the right direction was never so great as it is to-day. First, to resist evil tendencies; second, to resist them whenever they are found to be insidiously there. The real practical question is, What is the power of the nation when it has decided to throw off these evils? What has been the history of this nation in respect to the throwing off its evils? Do you believe there ever was a day when this church was filled with regiments of soldiers going to a war? Do you realize now that its pastor on Thanksgiving Day from its platform urged men to go out to fight in that war? It looks now like a dream, thank God! Remember what we went through during that terrific four years. Remember that this great people, east, west, north and south, submitted themselves to be taxed; rolled up debt until it looked like a mountain. The question was once propounded. Would the nation repudiate? The cunningest devil that ever tempted mankind was this repudiation temptation that was attempted here. Look at the millions of men getting their bread here by daily labor. Look at the millions of foreign born citizens here. Yet, when it was proposed to this great nation, none were more ready than these laboring men, and these foreign born to say that the debt which was contracted to save the nation from its peril must be paid. (Loud and long continued applause.) Was there ever a rebound in any nation that showed a people to have more wealth than the years that followed the war? What wild speculations of interested men! That is settled; we have got over that. See what dishonesty followed in the public service. Little by little society has discharged itself of this. The "rings" that have been formed during the last ten years have been gradually broken. It is in the power of the community to see that these running sores do not become ulcers. Then look at the resurrective power of nations. Mr. Beecher concluded by sketching the growth and development of the nations of Europe under the resurrective power.

Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Tabernacle was fairly filled yesterday with listeners to the Thanksgiving sermon of Rev. T. De Witt Talmage, who chose his text from Psalms 25, part of the 15th verse—"My cup runneth over." He said:—Every few years, in reference to celebrating the day of Thanksgiving, people say we have nothing to be thankful for, and this year they refer to the state of the manufacturing interests and to the financial troubles which, it is asserted, are in such a condition as to bring about serious apprehension for the future. But I say we have much to be thankful for, and, above all, for the love of Christ and for the proffer of Heaven made to us through Him. Indeed our cup runneth over. In speaking of the day the preacher said:—There is a table laid to-day which runneth the whole breadth of the Continent—it is a Thanksgiving table, spread with all the fulness of the earth, with the products of every State. There are, too, the songs of praise offered by the nation, which crowd the celestial gates with doxologies until the oldest harper in heaven is at a loss to comprehend from whence the music comes. Whatever we think of New England theology we certainly like the New England style of thanksgiving—Let all the nation come out with hymns of joy; let the trumpets blow; let all men praise the Lord and say, "my cup runneth over." Dr. Talmage then pictured in glowing terms a visit to the houses of the rich, and referred to the happy manner in which the day would there be spent in the midst of friends and relatives. He called upon them all when they sat down to their well laden board not to forget on this day the poor who were not so blest as they, and, moreover, before drawing their knives across the sharpening steel, to offer a few words of thankfulness to the Almighty for their blessings. Do not without thinking of those poor ones who are suffering hunger, or sit before your bright and warm fire without remembering that hundreds of your fellow beings have just exhausted the last scuttle of coal and the last candle. Remember them, and give to them but a tithe of your bounty, and they will be made happy. We ought to be thankful, above all, for the great good which was being effected by such institutions as good libraries and those grander institutions of learning, our public schools, where the Bible was to be found admitted. (Applause.) He concluded by saying, When you sit down to partake of the viands and good cheer with which your boards are loaded take the cup of thanksgiving and bring it to your lips, and if the chalice should spill on the cloth, do not be chagrined, but look up to heaven and say, "My cup runneth over."

STUFF YOURSELVES TO REPLETION

Washington Avenue Church.

The announcement that the Hanson place Baptist church Thanksgiving services would be held with Rev. Dr. Moore's church, and that Rev. Dr. Fulton would preach the Thanksgiving sermon, resulted in a large attendance yesterday at the morning service in the spacious edifice corner of Washington and Gates avenues, Brooklyn.

Dr. Fulton took as his text the eleventh chapter of Deuteronomy, in which the love and service of God are inculcated in the sacred writing, with a blessing to those who serve Him and threats of punishment to those who forsake His law. The Rev. Doctor began by calling attention to the era of good feeling which, upon this anniversary of a nation's great festival of praise to God, gave such cause for heartfelt thanksgiving. An era of good feeling he pointed out which for the first time in a long series of years was shared in by all the States on such an occasion as this, a new birth of fellowship which gives us the assurance that the prayers of millions offered up to this end are being answered, and in the restored Union we are fast becoming one people. Here he drew attention to the particular moral of the chapter he had read, which, although addressed to the people of Israel, was equally applicable to us, as a people, who, like Israel of old, are working out a special mission and a particular purpose, under God's own providence. That our first duty is to God we, most of us, admit, and in the manner of this day's observance we have the largest encouragement. It should be borne in mind that God promises temporal as well as spiritual good to them that serve Him. The Rev. Doctor then referred to the subject of education, as being the preparation to fit man to enjoy this temporal good promised him, to qualify him for the dignities that may be bestowed upon him. We needed, he said, to meet the duties of the future, a larger education than was necessary to the discharge of duties in the past, and to direct our enterprise upon the basis of known facts. The Doctor then branched into a politico-religious review of the South, referring to the odium into which the carpet-bagger had come as unjust. Joseph, said he, was a carpet-bagger, but he was the salvation of Egypt. The carpet-bagger in the South, he thought, had some such mission to reawaken the dormant energies of the people there, grown sluggish through the effects of slavery, and stimulate industrial activity in all classes. The speaker then pronounced in favor of educated suffrage and specie payments. He wanted a President who would not be afraid to say whether he was in favor of one, two or five terms. After reviewing, then, some of the issues decided by the war, notably the closer union of the States, and pointing out that in this land of universal toleration the conflict now waging in Germany had been settled two centuries ago, he concluded by a further application of the text, that if we abandoned the service of God as He has commanded, and become a nation of Sabbath breakers, we cannot expect a continuance of that favor now so abundantly shown us.

IN BROOKLYN.

Never has the day set apart for the time-honored custom of returning thanks to Almighty God been better or more generally observed in Brooklyn than yesterday. The public offices, schools, counting houses, workshops and stores were closed upon all sides. The houses of divine worship were open, with very few exceptions, during the forenoon, and were well attended by the people who are wont to offer their prayers at their parish church. The ministers were eloquent as the happy occasion, attentive listeners, a bright and cheerful sunlight, bracing atmosphere and peace and plenty could make them. They told the people what they had to be thankful for to God, and urged upon them the necessity, the Christian duty of contributing to the wants of their fellow beings whose lot in life has not placed them above want. Generous collections were taken up in most of the places of worship for the poor.

At the Kings County Penitentiary a concert was given at ten o'clock in the forenoon under the auspices of Chaplain Boss. The convicts were present. After the musical treat they were entertained with a liberal repast of turkey, cranberry sauce and pie. The indulgence did not stop here with the prisoners, who were permitted to talk and receive visits from their friends.

At the Truant Home the boys were feasted to their hearts' content at the expense of the more than generous municipal government. At the Protestant Orphan Asylum, Atlantic avenue, there was a bounteous repast of turkey served; the Catholic orphans were entertained liberally at their asylum; the aged and indigent females were fêted at their home on Washington avenue; as were also the boys at St. Vincent's Home, Poplar street; the inmates of Memorial Home for Consumptives, Seventh avenue; of the Inebriate's Home, Fort Hamilton; Industrial School and Home for Destitute Children, Butler street; Home for Friendless Women and Children, Concord street; Home for Aged Poor of both sexes, Chestnut street, and the House of the Good Shepherd, Atlantic avenue.

Contrary to expectation there was no extra provender provided by the Board of Commissioners of Charities for the unfortunate inmates of the Hospital, Almshouse, Nursery or Lunatic Asylum. Steward Murray, of the Poorhouse, however, took pity upon the sorrows of the forlorn paupers, who had no brighter outlook for Thanksgiving Day than the bitter cold, bleak Potter's Field adjoining the Almshouse, and cheered les miserables by treating each one to a paper of tobacco and a pipe. At the Asylum Warden Scott treated the demented to a plate each of ice cream and jelly.

Sheriff Williams dispensed the hospitality of the Jail for the day, and saw that each of the three hundred men, women and children sojourning there forgot their sorrows for the hour and feasted upon rich fowl and cranberry sauce, which he supplied from his own purse.

No less than thirty-one separate and distinct target companies paraded through the streets of the city, numbering in their ranks upward of 1,700 men. The ragamuffin turnouts were also numerous and a source of amusement to thousands of women and children who thronged the windows of the houses and heartily enjoyed the grotesque figures cut by "the boys." Among the jolly organizations most noticeable were the "Umbrella Guard," "Gentlemen of the Sixteenth Ward," "Neighbors' Sons" and the "Merry Few."

IN NEW JERSEY.

In Jersey City.

The festival was observed with becoming solemnity in all the churches of Jersey City. The great event of the day was the gathering of the Catholic Union in St. Mary's church, where a solemn high mass was celebrated. Rev. Father Smythe was celebrant; Father John, of the Passionists, deacon; Father Willetts, S. J., sub-deacon, and Father De Concilio, master of ceremonies. Among the clergy present were the Most Rev. J. R. Bayley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Primate of the United States; Rev. Father Senez, St. Mary's; Very Rev. G. H. Doane, V. G.; Rev. Father Vanata, Rev. Father Callan, Rev. P. Corrigan, Rev. P. Hennessey, Rev. Father Dwyer, of the Paulist Fathers; Rev. Father Delahanty, Indiana; Rev. Father Marshall, S. J.

Archbishop Bayley delivered a brief discourse to the members, in which he spoke of the necessity of union in order to combat the prevailing opinions of the age. One of these opinions was that the Catholic Church is opposed to progress. It was only necessary to remark that when railroads were first invented no such opinions were held. But it suited the enemies of the Catholic Church to make these charges when all others failed. The primary point to be attained was to make a man a Christian before making him a gentleman and a scholar. The Catholic Union could accomplish much good in this direction.

Father Bodfisch, of the Paulist confraternity, then preached a sermon, in which he exhorted the members of the Catholic Union to combine against the errors of the present day, which aimed at the destruction of religion and morality.

In Newark.

Since the custom of holding yearly Thanksgiving celebrations began there never has been such a general and hearty observance of the day and its recognized features in Newark as that witnessed yesterday. Business was entirely suspended, and crowds of people paraded the streets arrayed in their best toggery. At most of the churches large congregations assembled in the forenoon. At the Church of the Redeemer the pastor, Rev. Dr. Forrester, delivered a powerful discourse on the corruption which he said prevailed in the highest departments of the government. If Jesus could go to-day on the Alleghanies as he went on Mount Olivet He would weep indeed to see this land so overrun with official thieves and corruptionists. He was repeatedly interrupted with applause. At the County Jail and other institutions the prisoners were regaled with extra dinners and given extra privileges. No drunken rows disturbed the order of the day. In Twenty-four hours only nine arrests were made, and these for trivial offences.

In Trenton.

The day in Trenton was observed with becoming respect by all classes of the inhabitants, business was entirely suspended and the streets wore the aspect throughout the day of a Sabbath festival. In all of the churches special services were held and appropriate sermons delivered. The prayers of the rich and poor were offered up in unison together, giving thanks in the most heartfelt manner to the Almighty for the blessings He dispensed during the past year. The inmates of the public institutions received sumptuous feasts and the convicts in the State Prison were regaled with a bountiful dinner.

In Camden.

Divine services were held in all the churches at half-past ten o'clock in the morning, and collections were taken up for the benefit of the Camden Home for Friendless Children. A Thanksgiving family gathering took place in the Third street Methodist Episcopal church in the evening, which proved to be an interesting event. All the leading workshops, stores and business houses were closed, and the festival was strictly observed in every respect.

ON STATEN ISLAND.

Thanksgiving Day was generally observed as a holiday on Staten Island, all places of business being closed after ten o'clock in the forenoon and many of the more respectable drinking saloons being closed during the day. Services were held in most of the churches and by the chaplains in the public institutions about the island. Four hundred old and wornout sailors at the Snug Harbor, New Brighton, were provided with a roast turkey dinner, and the steward of the Seamen's Retreat at Stapleton furnished a cartload of turkeys and other niceties for the sick and disabled seamen in that institution. The "ragamuffins" turned out in full force and paraded the streets of the village on horseback and in wagons, dressed in all sorts of fantastic array. The Tully Guards of Tompinsville made a parade through the streets on a target excursion. The Staten Island sportsmen had trotting, running and hurdle racing, and the Richmond County Shooting Association had pigeon, turkey and target shooting at the Sea View Driving Park at New Dorp. The woods throughout the island were filled during the day with gunners from New York and Brooklyn. In the evening there were concerts in the Baptist church at Mariner's Harbor, in St. Paul's Methodist church at Pleasant Plains, and in the Bethel Church at Tottenville.

ON LONG ISLAND.

Union Thanksgiving services were held in various places on the island—Jamaica, Newtown, Flushing, Huntington, Babylon, Riverhead, Greenport, Sag Harbor, &c.—and the day was generally observed as a holiday.

The new Episcopal chapel at Flatbush was opened yesterday for the first time for combined dedication and Thanksgiving services, Bishop Littlejohn preaching the dedication sermon in the forenoon. Regular services will be held in the chapel on and after Sunday next. The Rev. J. W. Braden is rector.

At the Hempstead Driving Park there was a sweepstakes trot in the afternoon and a raffle for a fat heifer in the evening.

The ladies of St. Paul's Episcopal church at Patchogue had their annual turkey supper, of which there will be a "second edition" this evening—proceeds for the benefit of the pastor—and there was a grand ball at East Moriches in the evening.

IN WESTCHESTER.

In Westchester county Thanksgiving Day was, as usual of late years, appropriately observed by all classes of the community. It is scarcely necessary to state in this respect that, with a few exceptions, there was a total suspension of every kind of business, the thickly settled portions presenting a more than strictly Sabbatarian appearance of exclusiveness. Crowds of religiously disposed people during the forenoon attended the various places of worship, in some of which the pastors, during their discourses, laudably endeavored to inculcate upon the minds of their congregations that gratitude to the Divine Being for mercies received should not lack the quality of tangible thoughtfulness for the suffering and the needy in their midst. For those not devoutly inclined there were numerous pleasure-producing entertainments, including horse trotting, target shooting, dramatic exhibitions, balls and other kindred pastimes, all of which were liberally patronized. At Sing Sing Prison the 1,400 convicts, through the considerateness of Warden Walker, were permitted to participate in the joyousness and festivities of the occasion. During the forenoon religious exercises were conducted in the prison chapel, after which the inmates were regaled with a dinner embracing many little delicacies not often found on the prison bill of fare. When marched to their cells the jailbirds were allowed to amuse themselves by singing and talking to their hearts' content until the hour for putting out the lights arrived in the evening. The prisoners in the County Jail were also kindly remembered by Sheriff Carpenter. Many of them, in view of the good things furnished, enthusiastically expressed their determination to vote for that official for a second and even a third term of office. The boys and girls in the Catholic Protectory, at Westchester, also enjoyed a happy time under the kind indulgence of Brother Pellion, the rector of the institution, and his self-sacrificing assistants, the Christian Brothers.

THE CELEBRATION ELSEWHERE.

The Day at the National Capital.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26, 1874.

General Observance of the Day in San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 26, 1874.

Thanksgiving Day has been generally observed here. The State banks, courts, all public offices and places of business have been closed. Services were held in all the churches.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

An Important Feature of the Market.

THE ADVANCE IN GOLD.

A Plan for the Resumption of Specie Payment.

WALL STREET, THURSDAY, Nov. 26, 1874.

This being a national holiday no business was transacted on the "Exchange," and the only fresh news we have to present is that which may be found in our London despatches. Briefly reviewing the events of the last four days, it may be remarked that the notable feature of speculation has been the movement in gold, which has of late shown such steadiness as to elicit more than ordinary attention. The causes that have promoted the advance are of both a foreign and local nature. The rise of the rate of discount of the Bank of England, the return of American securities, their sale in this market for foreign account, the firmness of exchange, the large shipments of gold—all these influences have combined to produce the result which is seen, and it will not be surprising if a further advance takes place. Not a few among the large operators base their expectations of

THE FUTURE VALUE OF GOLD

upon the recommendations which they believe will be made to Congress by the President and the Secretary of the Treasury, urging a speedy return to specie payments. It is also thought that, as a preliminary step, the last named official will, at a not distant day, suspend the sale of government gold, with a view to the accumulation of coin in the public vaults. Indeed, there are those who profess to have seen letters from Washington which clearly foreshadow this policy, and upon this faith are basing their calculations as to the future course of the market. Unlike other movements in gold there is not apparent at the present time any evidence of or of efforts to create a purely speculative value. On the contrary, the purchases have been largely made for bankers and merchants, to be held for the purposes of trade and in anticipation of higher figures. The advance thus far being natural, and not hastened by combinations of operators, has, therefore, not provoked that prejudice which has been exhibited in other periods of active speculation. It may be added, however, that outside of ordinary commercial causes the action of Congress, should it legislate on the subject, in accord with the suggestions of the President and his Secretary, will be chiefly instrumental in advancing the value of gold and giving permanency to the same. The accumulation of gold is unquestionably the first step toward the resumption of specie payments, and looking to this end there is no reason why such a measure should not become popular.

CLIQUE MANIPULATION

A PLAN.

In connection with this subject we publish the following question and answer from a banker:—

Is the following plan for resumption of specie payments practicable, and, if not, why not?

First—Authorize the conversion of legal tenders into five per cent twenty year gold bonds at par.

Second—After July 1, 1875, cancel and destroy all legal tenders received by the government.

Third—After July 1, 1875, and before January 1, 1876, retire and cancel all national bank notes.

Fourth—Issue to any person depositing in the Treasury United States bonds ninety per cent of the bonds in United States gold notes, redeemable in sums of over $1,000 before January 1, 1876, and in any sums after that date, the bonds so deposited to draw only half interest while deposited, the amount of gold notes issued against bonds not to exceed the amount of legal tenders and national bank notes now authorized, national banks to have the preference to the extent of their circulation.

At a recent meeting of the Executive and Finance Committee of the Ohio and Mississippi Railway Company President Torrance submitted an address to the bond and stockholders of the company, in which he says the road is free from "floating debt," and that they have been enabled to call in for payment on demand, out of earnings in hand, the preferred stock scrip dividend due March 1, 1875.

The gross earnings of the road for the first four months of the present fiscal year, July to October inclusive, were, as per auditor's report	$1,341,742
Operating expenses, including taxes, construction account and all other expenditures except coupon interests and sinking fund, were	906,348
Leaving net available surplus for the four months	$435,394

He also announces that the company, having paid in advance out of earnings in hand the preferred stock scrip dividend, due March 1, 1875, will henceforth pay preferred stock dividends semi-annually, March 1 and September 1, as earned, as it is fully believed they will be in the future.

THE DEATH OF MRS. JUDD.

NOVEMBER 26, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In reference to the article in your issue of to-day headed "Suicide of a Noted Woman" I would wish to say that Mrs. Judd's death is supposed to be the result of accident. No such letter as described was found nor anything to leave the impression of suicide. Mrs. Judd was not the wife of Orin B. Judd, nor was her husband a minister; she was the wife of Albert Judd, of Bethel, Conn., who died in the West seven years ago. I am her only child.

THE COAL REGIONS.

Poverty and Distress Near the Mines.

Mayor Loftus' Letter to the Herald.

A SAD REVIEW.

A Letter from President O'Halloran.

INTERVIEW WITH BISHOP O'HARA.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25, 1874.

Your correspondent has the pleasure of giving below two personal letters addressed to the HERALD, which were placed in his hands to-day—one from the Mayor of Scranton and the other from Mr. James O'Halloran, the President of the Miners' National Association of Luzerne county, Pennsylvania. The Mayor, in his communication, reviews the situation exactly as it is, and corroborates his statements by the reports of his police, while Mr. O'Halloran reflects the opinion of the miners and shows that their grievances date back to 1865. Both letters will be found to be fair, manly and dignified. Too much cannot be said in behalf of the poor men, women and children of this district, many of whom are utterly destitute already, and all of whom must become so before spring. Destitute of means as well as credit, with no work and with large families to support, these men must have assistance or they will starve.

BISHOP O'HARA'S VIEW.

During the course of a conversation held with Bishop O'Hara to-day, he said:—

"When I came here first, six years ago, you could see the miners turning out from their little hamlets everywhere, come into town merry and light hearted, and return home again with their geese and turkeys and the like: but I fail to see them doing so now. On the contrary, great poverty exists in this neighborhood. I know of two instances where two men with families earn only $6 a week, and hence are compelled to use extraordinary economy to live. You know the Irish love good, healthy, wholesome food, but these two parties are actually forced to turn away from food of this kind and purchase that which is poor and unpalatable; that is, instead of fresh bread they are obliged to buy stale. The situation is extremely sad, and the price of everything very high. Rents in Scranton are actually higher in proportion to the population than they are in New York or Philadelphia. I am informed that there are hundreds of men about here who do not work more than six months of the year. We have a relief society, and we will have to raise much money this season in order that the poor may survive the winter."

A NATIONAL CALL.

As I stated in a former communication, I believe that before spring the country will have to come to the assistance of these poor people, who cannot find work, and many of whom are now forced to either steal or beg their bread. The destitution of their homes and the miserable, animal-like life they are forced to live on Shanty Hill will be communicated hereafter. At present I gladly make room for the letters of Mayor Loftus and Mr. O'Halloran:—

MAYOR LOFTUS' LETTER.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

The city of Scranton contains a population of about forty thousand, the principal portion of which depend upon the coal and iron works of the city for their support. All the immense coal works and iron mills were idle during the summer season, thus throwing out of employment for a period of about six months fully three-quarters of the men engaged therein. At present the managers of these works are running them on only half and three-quarter time. Workingmen and their families are now suffering for want of food and raiment. During the month of October an unusually large number of people were provided for, and yet twice this great number have been cared for during the present month of November. I consider that it would be a charity to aid a people who now find it impossible to maintain themselves and families, and the products of whose toil have been so beneficial to the country at large. When it is taken into consideration that wages are only half what they were last year, even those who are at work find it almost impossible to feed their wives and children, while the families of those who are idle must, of course, become utterly destitute.

The number of persons accommodated in one single station house during the month of October was 126. The parties were all exceedingly poor, and represented every condition of misery and distress. A few were comfortably clad, but almost all were so stricken with poverty that their bodies could not properly be said to have any clothing at all. This month the indications from the police reports are that we shall have a much larger number applying at the station houses than we had last. We can only accommodate a certain number, and when our house is full, unless they are otherwise provided for, many must be turned away.

I have no other motive in addressing you these lines than to acquaint you with the actual situation of thousands of our inhabitants. They have no work, they have no money, and they must live. Respectfully yours,

M. W. LOFTUS,
Mayor of Scranton.

JAMES O'HALLORAN'S LETTER.

SCRANTON, Pa., Nov. 25, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

I am a practical miner, having worked in the coal mines of Pennsylvania for ten years; at the present time I am President of the Miners' National Association of Luzerne county. During the recent grave disturbances I have been travelling from point to point, and therefore consider myself competent to address you concerning the struggle here between capital and labor.

The troubles are not of recent origin, but date back to 1865. At that time the rebellion was over, and the consumption of coal greatly decreased. During the war an immense number of men were employed in the mines, many of whom at the dawn of peace found themselves without work. The hire of the laborer and miner was suddenly reduced from twenty to thirty per cent, while the commodities, which were to him the necessaries of life, still held their original war prices. Additional reductions were made year after year until 1869. During the interval between 1865 and 1869 local strikes were constant, the capacity of coal cars in the mines was increased, and favors shown to particular nationalities, which caused frequent and almost constant disturbances. During this time (I can state it as a fact, because it was clearly proved and acknowledged at Harrisburg in 1871) the different operators entered into a combination and instituted what was known as the "black list," by means of which the name of a man discharged, either justly or unjustly, by one corporation was sent to every other, so that a man discharged at any given point could not secure employment at any other, an act which virtually exiled the unfortunate laborer from the anthracite coal field altogether—the anthracite coal field at this time embracing Luzerne, Carbon, Columbia, Northumberland and Schuylkill counties. Previous to 1865 and up to the present time the majority of the principal operators in Luzerne county held, in connection with their works, stores in which were sold all things that the laboring man would naturally require for his comfort—flour, meat, groceries, clothing, boots and shoes, furniture, &c., and though there was no order issued compelling men to deal at these companies' stores they were indirectly obliged to do so, sometimes being compelled to pay from twenty to thirty per cent more for a given article than it could be bought for elsewhere.

In the Lehigh region the company employed a physician, to whom every man in the mines was compelled to pay from fifty to seventy-five cents per month, whether he needed the doctor's services or not. Single men paid the former sum, married men the latter. I state all the facts, for the authenticity of which I can make an affidavit, to show the injustice which for years and years has been dealt out to the laborer in the Pennsylvania coal fields. Being thus systematically robbed and imposed upon, the miners, in 1869, awoke to the realities of the situation and formed a league for their mutual benefit and protection, for which the State government granted them an official charter.

On May 10, 1869, the men of the entire anthracite coal field suspended operations until some regular basis of prices should be established between the employers and employed. After some time the operators in Lehigh, Carbon, Schuylkill Northumberland and Columbia counties, along with the Wilkesbarre Coal and Iron Company of the Wyoming Valley, agreed upon a basis, which was kept up until 1870. A year previous to this coal fell in price below the basis agreed upon, so that neither operator nor miner could afford to work for the designated price. A general strike ensued which nothing could prevent.

The operators and carrying companies (the railroads) then met in secret council in Philadelphia and established a scale of prices which miners were compelled to accept or remain idle, said scale of prices being lower than miners had ever worked for previous to the war. After this monopoly had been formed, and the regular schedule of prices made out, individual operators who were willing to pay the miner his former hire were prevented from doing so on account of the exorbitant tolls charged by the carrying, or railway, companies which as just stated were in the ring. For instance the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad Company demanded $6 for carrying a ton of coal from Pottsville to Philadelphia, a distance of only 96 miles. After five months of a most bitter struggle, in which the miners, over thirty thousand in number, never committed an outrage nor any act of personal violence, resumed work because poverty compelled them to do so, and accepted the monopoly's unjust and unreasonable terms. Since 1871 the men have tried hard to earn their daily bread, subjected to the hardest and most grinding terms.

The panic came. In a very short space of time its effects were felt in the coal mines. After a brief interval many men were daily discharged, many of the mines ceased working and all of them reduced their time. Hundreds were thrown out of employment, whose associations prevented them from removing elsewhere. The panic brought about a marked reduction in wages; but at the same time the panic raised the price of coal; the panic was therefore considered by the operators as an excuse to reduce the wages of their men, and at the same time an excuse to increase the price of coal per ton. During all the excitement of the panic the companies' stores, at which all miners were indirectly compelled to deal, held their goods at their uniform price, despite the fact that the panic had greatly reduced the wages of the men. The foreman of every mine was compelled to report each night the amount of every man's earnings during the day.

Therefore, from what I have stated above, it will be seen that the present disturbances in the coal regions are not the developments of any recent circumstances, but the natural and inevitable issue of grievances that have been accumulating for many years. At the present time in the Wyoming and Lackawanna valleys thousands of men are idle; they are not naturally indolent; on the contrary, they are willing to work; they are willing to labor for a fair remuneration; it is not their desire to increase their wages by raising the price of coal. They simply ask the opportunity of supporting themselves and their families. At present hundreds are out of work and their families are in a critical condition; if they are not destitute now, they soon will be. Beyond all question this season will be the most deplorable the coal regions have ever seen. If this winter should be as dull as the last, the working people of Scranton will find it almost impossible to live, without external aid and assistance. The winter is just opening. Thousands of men are out of employment; they have no means to stay where they are; they have not enough money to remove themselves and their families elsewhere, and they must live. The citizens of Scranton do not appreciate the situation of the miners nearest them. They do not consider their poverty, want and distress. The abode of the miner is seldom visited by the operator; but I can state truly, that unless some extraordinary change takes place this winter—to the thousands of laboring men now out of work—will be the most terrible and deplorable this district has ever seen. I say this after travelling the valley from one end to the other, after visiting every colliery. After conversing with all the men and learning their sentiments, I dare not predict the issue, but unless something be done I cannot see how hundreds of the unemployed can escape starvation.

JAMES O'HALLORAN.

A Catholic Clergyman Denies the Existence of Terrorism and Murderous Gangs of "Molly Maguires."

MAHANOY CITY, Pa., Nov. 23, 1874.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:—

In your issue of the 20th inst. a correspondent, writing from this place, gives a terrible picture of the state of society in the coal region. The perpetration of all the horrible crimes recounted by your correspondent, is laid at the door of the "Molly Maguires," who, "since their denunciation by the Catholic clergy, have becomingly determined to perpetrate still more flagitious crimes in order to terrorize the communities where the priests reside and officiate." I have resided and officiated in this town for four years, and have yet to discover the existence of such a society, much less a single member of such an organization as the "Molly Maguires." My congregation is one of the largest in the county, covering a large territory, in the very heart of the coal region, and just the place where a person would infer from the tone of your correspondent most favorable to the growth of "Molly Maguirism." On the contrary, the people are peaceable, intelligent and law-abiding. Daniel Doherty, who is now in prison, charged with the murder of Chief Burgess Major, is classed by your correspondent as a "notorious Molly Maguire." Doherty has resided in this town for the last two years, during which time I met and conversed with him frequently. I always regarded him as a young man of sober and orderly character. I never heard his name mentioned in connection with rowdyism of any kind. The keeper of the hotel where Doherty boarded, publishes in a card in the Miner's Journal that Doherty was one of the most inoffensive and quiet men that ever stayed in his house, and he has kept boarders a long time. I deem it my duty to say so much in defence of Doherty, whom your correspondent would have us believe to be an incarnate devil.

The object of all this is to keep public opinion and incense the Court against Doherty, whose trial, I am told, is to come up in a short time. It has also been asserted by your correspondent that notices of a threatening character have been sent to ministers of this county notifying them to leave. Believe me, there is no truth in this whatever, and that the whole correspondence is a fabrication or falsehood, and I would not answer it were it not that your widespread circulation does the people of this county a great injustice. It is true that I have condemned all secret organizations because I consider them one of the great curses of our country, and I do not know that the morality of any one of them is better than the other. Free Masons, Molly Maguires, Odd Fellows and kindred societies are all chips of the same block. They are all the enemies of religion and morality, and in this town none of these societies are half so bad as a diminutive Liliputian society called the "Modocs." These little fellows (though some of them are old men) create considerable trouble by making night hideous, frightening the people by firing off revolvers furnished by some of our good citizens and paid for on time. If your correspondent had visited me or any other respectable citizen of the town or county the NEW YORK HERALD would not have been so deceived. I have been pastor of this congregation for years, I had charge of souls in Philadelphia and elsewhere, and I must, in justice, say that the people of Mahanoy City are as pious and good citizens as ever I met with. As to the unfortunate riot between our firemen it occurred through mere child's play, one company turning the hose on the other. I am yours, with much respect,

C. A. McFADDEN,
Pastor of St. Canice's church.

AN INDIAN EXECUTION.

The Hanging of the Half-Breed Toussaint Kensler, Who Dies Bravely with His Shoes Off.

[From the Cheyenne Leader, Nov. 20.]

Notwithstanding the general expectation that the President would interfere at the last moment and commute the sentence of the law, which required Kensler's death by hanging, between twelve and two o'clock P. M., on Thursday, the 19th of November, no communication to that effect had been received from any one in authority and the preparations for the execution of Toussaint Kensler, the half-breed murderer, were quietly proceeded with by Sheriff Carr.

THE PREPARATIONS.

The morning dawned beautifully, and at an early hour this little city was up and astir. Many stock and ranch men from the north, who reside near Fort Laramie, in the vicinity of which Kensler committed the crime which he was about to expiate, had come to town on the previous day and were anxious to witness the final scene. Many inquiries were made concerning the prisoner, &c., and so anxious were many to get a look at him that they besieged the building where he was confined and hung to the window frames of the same, but only a few were gratified in their curiosity.

Kensler retired on Wednesday evening at nine o'clock and passed the hours intervening before sunrise in a deep, unbroken slumber. He arose at seven the next morning and partook of a breakfast served from Sheriff Carr's private table. Soon after breakfast his spiritual adviser, Father McGoldrick, was shown to his cell and engaged with the prisoner in religious exercises of a fervent nature. In these ceremonies Kensler showed a warm religious feeling, and Father McGoldrick is convinced that Kensler died at peace with his Maker.

In the cell he did not manifest any fear to meet his impending doom, but, on the contrary, exhibited coolness free from bravado. In all his confidential conversations with Father McGoldrick and others he has ever declared his innocence of the crime with which he is charged; even within a few minutes of the time set for his execution, while kneeling in his cell with Father McGoldrick, and almost in sight of the eternal world, he solemnly declared that he had not fired the shot which killed Adolph Pinea at Cuney & Ecoffey's ranch, on the Sabille, on the 9th of April, 1872.

ON THE SCAFFOLD.

At fifteen minutes past twelve Kensler, accompanied by Father McGoldrick, Sheriff Carr, and his assistants, and Sheriff Dayton, of Albany county, entered the building on Twentieth street, in which the gallows had been erected, and where a few spectators, who had cards of admittance, had already assembled. Kensler and his spiritual guide took seats near the fire and entered into a whispered conversation, closing with a silent prayer. At a signal from the Sheriff, his deputy, W. Taylor, conducted the prisoner to the platform. Kensler advanced with a firm tread, and ascended the steps leading to the gallows without manifesting the slightest hesitation or muscular tremor. He took his seat upon a chair which had been placed there for him. Sheriff Carr then read the death warrant, to which the culprit listened attentively, his eyes being fixed upon the Sheriff's countenance during the reading, after which Sheriff Carr asked the unfortunate man whether he had anything more to say. Kensler replied:—"I have nothing to say, only to ask permission not to die with my shoes on." That permission was granted him. Father McGoldrick then advanced to the platform, and in a voice quivering with emotion offered a supplication to the Deity, Kensler repeating the words after his spiritual adviser. "Jesus died for me" and "Jesus, I love thee," was pronounced with firmness by the former, the last words he was heard to utter. The priest closed with "God bless you," and, making the sign of the cross over Kensler's head, he retired. Then the awful, terrible moment arrived when this human being was to be hurled into the presence of his Maker, to enter those portals which never outward swing.

THE EXECUTION.

The Sheriff then stepped behind the condemned man, pinioned his arms behind him, and then concealed his face under the folds of the black cap. At this time only a slight tremor of the body was observed, and Sheriff Carr had to call upon one of his assistants to "steady" the prisoner. Father McGoldrick here again stepped forward, and, addressing the prisoner, said, "Have confidence in your God, and He will have mercy upon you."

Immediately after the trap was sprung by Sheriff Carr, and the form of Kensler fell about five feet through a trap into the cellar below, and hung there. He fell at twenty-eight minutes past twelve. No severe struggle was manifest in his body, a tremor only being perceptible. The last spark of life fled from the body eight minutes after it fell, and when at fifty minutes past twelve the attending physicians pronounced life extinct, the body was taken down and placed in a coffin; and, no friends appearing to claim the remains they were buried by the county authorities in the afternoon. Thus has Toussaint Kensler, the half-breed, atoned for the crime committed in taking the life of a fellow man. Let all the semi-civilized inhabitants of our border take due warning.
